Hell, a fallen curse word?

Chicago (UPI) — Hell has fallen so far out of fashion that it has even lost its oomph as a curse word, the Rev. James Breig said in the November issue of U.S. Catholic Magazine.

Surveys show 70% of Roman Catholics believe in life after death, Breig said, but only one-third believe in hell.

And of those who do believe in hell, only one person in eight feels hell is a real threat to him, he said.

"Catholics are not so much denying hell as just ignoring it," he said.

Saudi stop is added

Washington (AP) — President Carter has added a stop in Saudi Arabia to his four-continent trip next month to hold talks with King Khalid and Crown Prince Fahd on Middle East problems, aid to developing nations and energy, White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said Monday.

The stop will allow the refueling of Air Force One during the long trip from Lagos, Nigeria, to New Delhi, India.

Employment is 'problem'

New York (UPI) — The city of New York has never recovered from the recession of 1969, Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., said Monday.

"The one great problem, the one great phenomenon, is the extraordinary decline in employment. New York has lost jobs every year since 1969," Moynihan said.

'Puff less' law passes

Paris (AP) — A new law went into effect Monday obliging the French to puff less in public or pay some of the stiffest antismoking fines in Europe.

The rules bar smoking of all kinds in elevators, post offices, banks, schools, government offices dealing with the public and any public place frequented by those under 16.

Violators may be fined from $8.25 to $16.50, according to where the outlaw smoker is caught.

Interest rate to be lowered

Washington (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service said Monday it will reduce the interest rate charged on overdue taxes from 7% to 6%, effective next Feb. 1.

The IRS said it had established the new interest rate because of changes in the prime lending rate of banks over the past year.

Crack is success secret

Yadkinville, N.C. (AP) — Stanley Allen says the secret to his success is the crack between his front teeth.

Allen outspat a group of men and women of all ages to take the grand prize — a spitoon — in the weekend Harvest Festival tobacco-spitting contest. His winning mark: 20 feet, 5½ inches.

Allen, a 30-year-old resident of Tobaccoville, says he has the benefit of many years of experience. He has been chewing since he was 14, and he doesn't care if some people think his expectorating is unbecoming.

"They say it doesn't look nice," Allen said.

Commandos storm jet

Bonn, West Germany (AP) — West German commandos stormed a hijacked Lufthansa jetliner under cover of darkness at Somalia's Mogadishu airport early Tuesday, rescued all 86 hostages aboard and killed at least three of the four hijackers, officials reported.

"The hostages of Mogadishu are free," said government spokesman Karl Boelling. "We are thankful that the people of several nations and citizens of our country have survived this brutal hijacking."

Boelling said one passenger was taken to a hospital "in a state of collapse" and one German commando was injured. Other passengers received medical treatment at the East African airport, but the extent of their injuries was not known.

A Lufthansa spokesman said three of the hijackers were shot to death amd a fourth seriously wounded. Boelling initially said all four hijackers had been killed, but he later said the report has not been confirmed.

The airline official also reported the hijackers were three men and one woman, contrary to earlier reports that there were two men and two women.

Boelling said the raid was "a very serious lesson" for hijackers around the world, and he thanked Somalia's Marxist government for helping the lightning assault.

The commandos stormed the plane through emergency exits on both wings, a technique they had practiced on a similar plane, a Lufthansa spokesman said. He said there was some shooting, but details of the raid were sketchy.

Informed sources said the raiders found that the hijackers had placed explosives inside the plane and poured gasoline on the carpeting, but apparently had no time to ignite them.

The sources said the hostages were buckled in their seats. The Lufthansa spokesman said there was no panic, and the passengers were quickly evacuated down inflatable slides.

The crack anti-terror specialists reportedly overpowered the hijackers with "blinding" grenades, which lack shrapnel and temporarily stun victims with a blinding flash and loud explosion.

The German raid came at 3 a.m. Tuesday, the spokesman said — only 30 minutes before the hijackers had threatened to blow up the Lufthansa 737 jetliner unless their demands were met.

The only hostage reported killed in the 4½-day, 6,000-mile odyssey was the pilot, Juergen Schumann, 37, who was apparently shot Monday by the hijackers during a stop in Aden, South Yemen. His body was dumped out of the jet on arrival in Mogadishu.

The West German assault recalled the celebrated Entebbe raid when Israeli commandos rescued more than 100 hostages held aboard a hijacked Air France jetliner by pro-Palestinian terrorists. The Israeli soldiers boarded three airplanes and flew from Tel Aviv to Uganda for their secrecy-shrouded nighttime ambush on July 4, 1976.

"The job is finished," were the first words Chancellor Helmut Schmidt heard from his chief aide Hans Juergen Wischnewski, who had negotiated with the hijackers and telephoned from Mogadishu to Bonn immediately after the raid, Boelling reported.

The passengers were expected to return to Frankfurt Tuesday afternoon, he added.

In Washington, President Carter congratulated the West German government for the "courage of their decision" in staging the assault. U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim also hailed the raid.

One German government official said he felt "relief, but tempered relief. We must remember that the pilot was killed and they still have Schleyer. We don't know what happened to him."

There was no word on the fate of Hanns Martin Schleyer, a German industrialist kidnaped six weeks ago. His abductors had threatened to kill him Sunday unless the West German government agreed to meet the hijackers' demands.

Boelling issued an appeal to Schleyer's kidnapers: "Release your prisoner and realize that the road to terrorism is the road to self-destruction."

German radio reported that crack anti-terror specialists of the paramilitary Federal Border Guard's special "GSG-9" unit had stormed the plane under a cover of darkness and freed all 86 hostages.

The hostages were rescued only 90 minutes before 3:30 a.m. (7:30 p.m. Monday CDT) deadline, the Bonn spokesman said.

The first indication that a commando raid was planned came from an Israeli radio monitor who reported that a Boeing 707 "mystery plane" of unknown nationality had landed Monday evening at Mogadishu airport. A radio conversation between the pilot and Frankfurt indicated the plane carried a special commando squad.

The hijackers, armed with plastic explosives, sought the release of 11 prisoners from West German jails and two Palestinians imprisoned in Turkey as well as $15 million from the Bonn government.

Schmidt's government let three earlier deadlines pass without making any move to comply with the hijackers' demands, and Turkish officials indicated they would act only if West Germany did.

The four terrorists had seized the Majorca-to-Frankfurt Lufthansa flight Thursday and commandeered the plane to the Horn of Africa.

Passengers on board the hijacked jet included two Americans — Christine Maria Santiago, 44, of Santee, Calif., and her 5-year-old son, Leo. Mrs. Santiago has a heart condition.

Her family and friends were at prayer Monday night when they heard the news. Then the phone rang. "My brother-in-law answered and said she was safe," said Mrs. Santiago's 20-year-old son, Tom, in Los Angeles.

In the Vatican, Pope Paul VI sent a telegram to Joseph Cardinal Hoeffner, head of the German Episcopal Conference, saying he would offer himself as a hostage "if it would be of use" in obtaining the freedom of those held by the hijackers. The 80-year-old pontiff also appealed to the hijackers to end their "cruel undertaking."

It was an unprecedented offer by a Pope, and Vatican observers interpreted it as more than a grand gesture.

Ex-fire investigators among arson suspects

Boston (AP) — A former captain of the Boston Fire Department's arson squad and a retired state police arson detective were among more than a dozen persons arrested Monday in what officials called the most extensive arson-for-hire ring ever uncovered.

"The magnitude of the case, as it developed, shocked us because of the number of respectable people involved," said an aide to state Atty. Gen. Francis X. Bellotti.

A Suffolk County grand jury returned 120 secret indictments against 33 persons last week, charging them with crimes ranging from arson, fraud and conspiracy to manslaughter and murder.

In predawn raids in the Boston area Monday, state troopers arrested 14 of the 33 — the former arson agency officials, three public adjusters, two lawyers and seven businessmen. Public adjusters are professional negotiators who represent property owners in working out settlements with insurance companies.

"The people involved cut across the entire social and economic spectrum," Bellotti said.

He said the indictments stemmed from a four-month-long investigation of 150 suspicious fires in Boston, suburban Revere and Chelsea, which is adjacent to Boston, between 1973 and 1976.

Three persons died in the fires, and four of the persons arrested Monday were indicted on murder charges in the deaths. Bellotti would not identify those charged with murder.

At an arraignment Monday, 11 of those arrested pleaded innocent to arson and related charges. They were freed on $100 personal recognizance and their cases were continued until early next month.

The others were to be arraigned later.

Bellotti said the investigation uncovered corruption in the state fire marshal's office, the Boston Fire Department arson squad and fire departments in Boston and Chelsea. He attributed the corruption to what he called an ongoing practice of using arson squads as "a dumping ground for retired officers."

An aide to Bellotti said the investigation was begun after investigators realized that certain names appeared frequently in suspicious fire reports.

A pattern to the fires was established, and investigators then found a man who was caught up in the alleged ring and feared he would be killed for what he knew, according to the Boston Evening Globe. The newspaper said the unidentified man helped investigators crack the operation.

"In my opinion, the torches (people who set the fires) are the least culpable," said Assistant Atty. Gen. Stephen Delinsky. "It's the people who put them in operation that are the most culpable."

Bellotti said 24 pieces of property valued at $6 million were burned in the alleged arson operation.

Investigators said most of the buildings were tenements which were sold at bargain prices to accomplices in the alleged ring after they were burned. They said insurance companies were then told the gutted structures would be renovated, but, once insured, the buildings were again set afire.

Not all of those arrested or indicted were identified.

Among them were James DeFuria, retired state police arson squad detective; Leo Weissentaner, retired captain in the Boston Fire Department arson squad; John Fothergill, retired Chelsea fire captain and a public adjuster;

Lawyers Dennis Liakos of Concord and Warren O'Brien of Boston; public adjusters Samuel Theran of Swampscott, Andrew Maddaleni of Malden and George Carey of Everett; Henry Young of Newton, a finance company manager and insurance broker; John Joyce, a Canton real estate agent; Martin Loplow, a Randolph real estate agent, and Solomon Kaplan of Brookline, president of a finance company.

Foul play cried after swiping of fowl

Oregon City, Ore. (AP) — A goose has been swiped from Clackamas Community College and officials are crying fowl play.

Jerry Herrmann, director of the college's environmental center, said the African goose was "definitely an asset to the program. Unfortunately, it has disappeared."

He said he hopes that if the loss "is tied to someone's activities, that that person would return it."

Herrmann said the goose was brought to the center by Earl Rowe, who for 11 years has been nursing sick and injured wild birds. The goose had been rescued from children who were chasing it and hitting it with stones.

Rowe nursed it back to health with the help of a veterinarian. The goose is blind and can't fly.

Three days after Rowe gave it to the college, the goose disappeared.

"Anything that has suffered like that goose deserves better," Rowe said.

Councilmen lambaste CETA 'crutch,' 'joke'

By Gordon Winters
Star Staff Writer

Two city councilmen who characterize themselves as being pro-business Monday lashed out at a federal program designed to put the unemployed to work.

Councilmen Bob Sikyta and Joe Hampton said the program competes with private business for workers.

In addition, the two complained because the Lincoln Alliance, a coalition of various citizen groups, benefits from the program because two staff workers are paid through the program, the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA).

About 170 persons are employed locally through the program under contracts which amount to about $1.4 million. The contracts are for periods up to 18 months.

Hampton criticized the program as being one of the factors that is undermining Americans' desire to work.

"We no longer have the impetus of 'produce or go under,' " Hampton said. "If it wasn't for the crutch of this program people would go out and seek a job in the private sector and be a lot more productive."

"It's a laughing joke among young people today as to how they can exist in various governmental programs without having to exert themselves," Hampton said.

People realize they can gravitate from program to program," he said.

Hampton said that the Lincoln Alliance should not have received funding (its grant is for $23,312 for an office manager and research assistant) because it "borders on a political organization that is out to promote a philosophy.

"What would you do if the John Birch Society or the Klu Klux Klan applied?" Hampton asked.

Mayor Helen Boosalis replied that the two organizations could participate if they met the guidelines of the program. Nonprofit corporations are eligible to participate in one of several separate aspects of the program.

Other agencies among those which have CETA workers are the Boy Scouts of America, the League of Human Dignity, the Indian Center, Tabitha Home, the League of Women Voters, Goodwill Industries, Nebraska Chamber Orchestra and the Lincoln Center Association.

Councilman Bob Jeambey said Mrs. Boosalis does not have to take blame for the program because it was created by Congress and is the policy of the United States.

He suggested that Hampton and Sikyta try to get the rest of the council to agree to enforce stricter guidelines on what nonprofit organizations could benefit by the program.

"We will bounce them off the feds and see if they are legal," Mrs. Boosalis said.

Water system's revenue looks big but isn't really

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Water System, according to a recent report by Moody's Investment Service, showed an apparent profit of 42% last year — the same year a 40% rate increase went into effect.

Of $4,991,000 collected from water sales for fiscal 1975-76, a total of $2,177,000 is reported by Moody's as "excess revenue" after operating expenditures.

These figures are correct, but they can be misleading to the uninitiated, water system business manager Jack Vavra said Monday.

Actually, the utility does not make a "profit," but plows all excess revenues into capital improvements, he said.

The excess is not out of line with water systems in other cities the size of Lincoln, he said.

During 1975-76, approximately $4 million went into capital improvements, including a $3 million purchase of additional land at the Ashland well field, Vavra noted.

So there was no cash surplus, but actually a deficit of about $2 million that year.

In many years, the amount spent for improvements in the well field, pumping stations, water mains and treatment plants exceeds any surplus collected from customers.

In fact, during all years when no new bonds are issued, the utility expects to show a deficit rather than a surplus, Vavra explained.

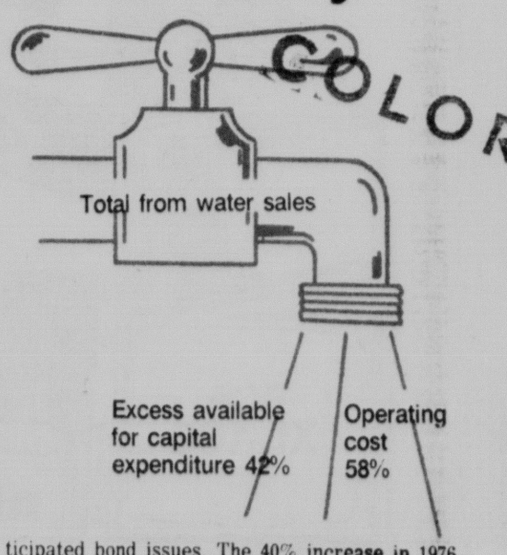

During the next six years, plans call for $28 million in capital improvements for the water system. The money will go for new wells, new pumping stations, new water mains throughout Lincoln, and initial work on a new filter plant at Ashland and a new main to transport water from Ashland to Lincoln.

These improvements are needed because Lincoln is growing, Vavra said.

"We're in a strong financial position. We want to be sure when large projects come we have sufficient working capital and enough to finance new bond issues," he said.

There was a bond issue totaling $6.5 million last February, and another $6 million bond issue is scheduled for 1980. Another issue is "probable" in 1982, according to the plan.

Rate increases are directly related to anticipated bond issues. The 40% increase in 1976 was timed in order to cover the interest on bonds issued in 1977.

"We try to plan five to seven years ahead," Vavra said, in order to avoid having to make emergency rate changes to meet crisis situations.

Rates also have to be high enough to bring in sufficient revenue if people use less water than anticipated.

This past summer was rainier than expected, so customers used less water than usual. Revenues during the past two months have been down as a consequence, Vavra said.

Long-term conservation trends could have the effect of slowing the timetable of capital improvements, he noted.

Instead of speaking of a "profit" from water sales, it would be more realistic from an investor's point of view to study the annual return on the water system's total capital investment, Vavra suggested.

The entire utility "plant," including land, buildings, water pipes and equipment, represents an investment of $43,188,000, which brings in an annual return of about $2 million, he said.

This is only about a 5% return on the investment, he noted.

Estrogen will carry warning

Washington (AP) — Starting Tuesday, the government is requiring that women who receive prescriptions for drugs containing estrogen be given a brochure in simple language explaining that estrogen may cause cancer.

Estrogens, the female sex hormone, are used by five million American women during and after menopause. Dr. Donald Kennedy, the commissioner of food and drugs, said the government hopes the warning label will cut this use at least in half.

"Estrogens are valuable drugs, with many beneficial medical purposes," said Kennedy. But he said the Food and Drug Administration fears they are being used too frequently and for too long. For women who use estrogen drugs during and after menopause "for longer than a year the risk of cancer of the lining of the uterus is about five to 10 times greater than for women who have never taken estrogens," Kennedy said.

He added that "women who use estrogens after menopause are about two and one half times as likely to develop gall bladder disease requiring surgery."

Kennedy said in a news conference the least necessary use of estrogens is after menopause. He said there was "no good evidence that estrogens are effective in helping to keep the skin soft or to promote more youthful feelings in the post-menopausal woman. Yet they are widely used for such purposes."

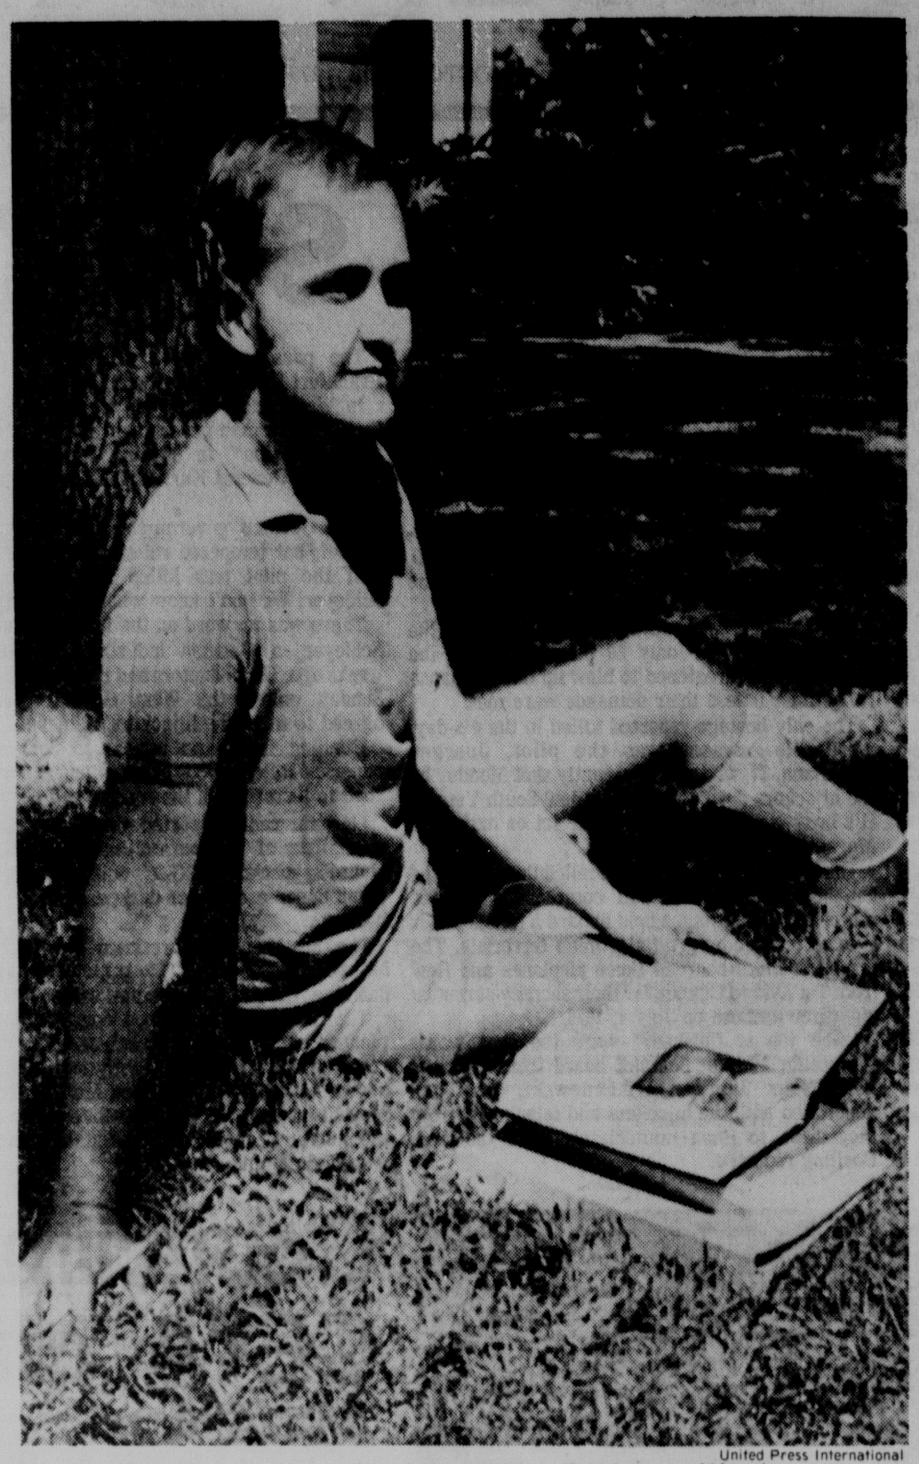

The brochure, which drug manufacturers must print and supply to pharmacists and other dispensers of estrogen, advises women to take estrogen drugs for the shortest time possible and in the lowest effective dose for treatment of menopausal symptoms.

The FDA says about eight million women also receive estrogen as an ingredient in many contraceptive pills, but there is no evidence linking that estrogen use to cancer. However, since 1970 the FDA has rquired that birth control pills be dispensed with a warning about their possible health risks to women and their babies. FDA officials said they feel that the post-menopausal use of estrogens is the most serious problem.

The most commonly prescribed brand is Premarin, and other brands are Hormonin, Estratab, Evex, Menest, Femogen and Ogen, the FDA said.

The agency proposed requiring a leaflet with estrogen prescriptions in July. Original effective date for the brochure requirement was Sept. 20. The date was pushed back after the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association and the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists challenged the FDA action in court suits.

A federal court in Delaware refused to issue a preliminary injunction against the FDA. The opponents of the brochure requirement also have filed suits in federal courts in Louisiana and Oklahoma that are pending.

David Carr is a college freshman who thinks positively.

Disease hasn't got Carr down

Tampa, Fla. (UPI) — David Carr knows the leukemia and cancer that invaded his body can kill him, but the 19-year-old college student thinks positively and wants to graduate so he can attend law school.

Despite continued chemotherapy treatments and repeated stays in the hospital, Carr has managed a "B" average as a freshman at the University of Tampa. He is taking only nine hours of classes this semester as a sophomore to save his strength for more hospitalization in January.

"The treatments really run you down," Carr said. "I found last year that four classes (a semester) were too much."

Carr was a sophomore in high school when stricken by leukemia. "I was down when I first got leukemia," Carr said. "But then I felt it wasn't going to help my situation so I decided to think positively. I do okay."

He managed to graduate three years later in 1976 by using a Hillsborough County school system program in which teachers tutor students in their own homes. He was voted prom king and "friendliest senior" by his graduating class.

Then last year, doctors found malignant cancer cells on his spine. This has led to agonizing, strength-sapping chemotherapy treatments.

"There is pain, but you have to accept it. If you don't, you will come out of the treatments feeling down and you will get a bad attitude that way," he said.

Doctors are optimistic about Carr's progress. They say the malignant spine cancer appears to have been arrested through monthly spinal tap treatments.

"They say I am in good shape," Carr said. "I could go on for years or just a few years. They have told me that I am very lucky, but not too many people are as optimistic as I am."

Carr says the realization of having a disease that can be fatal has brought him to find out "what friends and surroundings mean to me. You never know how much something is dear to you until you realize you might lose it in the near future."

Autumn suddenly looked like winter in inland areas of the Northeast Monday, as a storm dumped snow on parts of Pennsylvania and New York and drenched coastal areas from Virginia to New England with rain.

As the storm traveled up the coast, rain and snow reached as far wests the lower Great Lakes and upper Ohio Valley.

In New York, Pennsylvania and New England, there were scattered power failures, flooding and warnings that temperatures would plummet.

In interior Pennsylvania, up to a foot of wet snow fell on trees still laden with turning leaves, weighing down branches that snagged and snapped power lines. Hundreds of motorists were stranded along two of the state's major highways.

Joseph Krum, community affairs manager for Pennsylvania Power and Light Co. in Hazleton, said 45,000 customers between Pottsville and Honesdale had been without service Sunday night.

A spokesman for the National Weather Service said forecasters in Pennsylvania had expected snow, but not nearly as much as fell. He said a matter of a few degrees in temperature made the difference.

"It's a very critical thing," he said. "A very complicated thing, a matter of wind flow patterns and other factors."

Schools in three northern Pennsylvania counties were closed, and parts of Interstate highways 80 and 81 were reported closed.

The heaviest snow fell at high elevations in Pennsylvania's Appalachian Mountains. Hazleton reported 13 inches and Frackville 12.

The storm lashed the eastern half of New York state with heavy rains and dumped up to four inches of snow on western counties. It left widespread flooding in low-lying areas, downed power lines and disrupted harvests of such key crops as corn, potatoes and onions.

A burst of sharply colder air invaded New York, sending midday temperatures plummeting by 10 to 15 degrees and turning rain to snow in the Adirondacks. Temperatures there and in parts of Pennsylvania Monday night were expected to dip into the mid 20s.

Supersonic jet to land in New York Wednesday

Washington (AP) — The Supreme Court said Monday that the Concorde supersonic jetliner may land at John F. Kennedy International Airport whenever the two airlines offering Concorde service are ready to enter the lucrative New York market.

Spokesmen for British Airways and Air France said they would make a test flight of the controversial faster-than-sound airplane to JFK from Paris on Wednesday.

Both airlines said they hoped to begin commercial trans-Atlantic service linking London and Paris with New York by Nov. 22.

"We're on our way," a British Airways spokesman said. "It has been an enormous and costly battle, but we have won." In Paris, French Transportation Secretary Marcel Cavaille said the Supreme Court ruling was "in line with justice and good sense."

In a brief sentence, the nation's highest court handed a crushing defeat to New York and New Jersey officials who successfully had fought for nearly two years to keep the Concorde out of New York.

The justices merely turned down a request by the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which operates JFK, to temporarily postpone the start of Concorde operations at the airport pending a formal appeal to the court by the port authority.

In effect, that left intact a ruling by the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Sept. 29 that Concorde operations could begin immediately.

New York Gov. Hugh Carey expressed disappointment at the Supreme Court ruling but pledged to abide by it.

Port authority attorneys had told the Supreme Court they wanted to appeal the lower court's ruling because it left authority officials liable to "successful noise suits."

The authority said Monday that it still intends to appeal, but even if the court agrees to review the case, its processing could take months — and the Concorde already will be flying into and out of the city.

In other matters Monday, the court:

—Indicated that it might not reach the landmark decision many legal scholars believed it would in the much-publicized "reverse discrimination" case of Allan Paul Bakke.

The court asked attorneys for both sides in the case that challenges the constitutionality of so-called affirmative action programs that give racial minorities special preference to submit additional legal briefs. The justices want to hear the lawyers' opinions of how the 1964 Civil Rights Act affects Bakke's case.

If the court decides the case only on the wording of the 1964 law, which forbids discrimination by educational institutions receiving federal funds, the potential for a ruling with profound effects on the nation's race relations will be diminished.

—Agreed to decide whether the Securities and Exchange Commission may issue a string of 10-day suspension orders blocking trading in a particular security for many months. What the court decides could have a big effect on the SEC's policing procedures.

— Let stand a lower court's order directing New York City officials to take specific steps aimed at limiting vehicle traffic and improving air quality in Manhattan. The lower court described the city's air as containing five times the carbon monoxide pollution federal health standards allow.

— Agreed to decide in an Arizona case whether police need a warrant to search for evidence at the scene of a murder.

— Rejected an appeal by North Carolina lawyer Jerry Paul, who sought to challenge his contempt of court conviction growing out of his successful 1975 defense of Joan Little.

Miss Little's case won international attention when civil rights activists and feminists supported her against murder charges in the stabbing death of a Beaufort County Jail guard. Miss Little claimed she killed the guard in self-defense after he sexually assaulted her.

Miss Little later was imprisoned for a burglary conviction, but she escaped from confinement last Saturday.

The court's action in the Concorde case came 20 months after the federal government approved Concorde operations at JFK and Dulles International Airport near Washington for a 16-month trial period.

Legal maneuvers by the port authority, however, succeeded in limiting Concorde service to the United States to two flights a day at Dulles.

The Concorde was built jointly by the governments of Britain and France and by private industry in both countries. It cost some $3 billion to develop, and the 16 existing Concordes boast the ability to cut transatlantic travel time in half.

The Carter administration recently backed the possible spread of Concorde service to other U.S. cities.

Iowa rookie saves a life

Corning, Iowa (UPI) — A rookie police officer on his first solo night duty saved the life of a retired farmer early Sunday by pulling him out of a mobile home as it was engulfed by flames.

Officer Tom Nolan, 23, said he was on routine patrol when he spotted the fire in the rear-view mirror of his patrol car. He said he rushed to the mobile home court and began breaking windows and kicking in the doors of the blazing trailer.

As he kicked in the third door, Bill Quinn, 56, fell into Nolan's arms. Quinn had stopped breathing, so Nolan dragged him away from the flames and compressed his chest to start Quinn breathing again.

All major brands enhance their flavor artificially. Only Real gives you all natural taste because Real uses only the finest tobacco blend to which nothing artificial has been added. Nothing.

You get great satisfying taste. And all of it is natural. All of it.

Now enjoy the cigarette that says it tastes best—and proves it. Low tar Real, the natural cigarette. Only 9 mg. tar.

*The National Test.

Regular king-size filter smokers—both full-flavor and low tar smokers—tested Real Filter and major non-menthol low tar brands. Each person smoked one low tar brand on an unidentified basis and rated it. Real Filter was rated higher overall than every low tar brand tested. It was rated higher on taste, satisfaction, natural taste and rich flavor. Yet Real has only 9 mg. tar.

The natural cigarette. Nothing artificial added.

Arrogant Big Oil invites disaster

Anthony Lewis

Washington — The debate about American energy policy intensifies in bitterness. But at its heart is a reality that no one can dispute: The United States has become, and is still becoming, ever more dependent on imported oil. If we focus on that basic fact, the meaning and importance of the debate may become clearer.

In 1973, before the Arab boycott, the United States imported about 35 percent of the oil it used — a figure so worrying that President Nixon proclaimed "Project Independence." It was supposed to end American reliance on foreign oil, but it did not change the trend. This year imports are providing 48 percent of the oil used in this country.

Energy is a subject of concern for the world, not any single country alone. But one does not have to be a jingo to understand that a growing need for imported oil has particular consequences for a great power. President Carter was speaking with restraint at his last press conference when he said he was concerned at "the serious security implications of becoming increasingly dependent upon foreign oil supplies which may for some reason be interrupted."

The economic consequences are even easier to understand than the political. In 1971 the United States spent $3.7 billion for imported oil. Last year the figure was nearly ten times that, $36 billion. This year the bill is expected to be $45 billion.

The American balance of payments is already showing extremely adverse effects from the rising cost of oil imports. Concern about that burden is a major factor in the dollar's current troubles in foreign exchange markets. Americans on the whole remain oblivious to the strain on their currency, but some in London and Frankfurt do not.

And the financial burden today is only a pale intimation of what it will be if the United States goes on using more and more oil from abroad. The administration has projected, on present trends, in 1985 imported oil would cost $550 billion. No serious person, in politics or the oil business or anywhere else, thinks this country can keep going in such a direction.

It is in the context of those grim realities that the oil industry's highly successful campaign against the Carter policy must be judged. The Senate, adopting industry views, has expunged just about every trace of Carter's legislation. Instead, it has gone for a "free market" solution, emphasizing removal of controls and increasing of financial incentives to the oilmen to produce more.

The interesting question about those industry ideas adopted by the Senate is what effect they will have on the urgent problem of dependence on imported oil. The answer is that, for at least a considerable number of years, they are likely to have no effect whatever.

American oil production has been gradually declining for years, and no authority believes that it can be turned dramatically upward again. Recent experience with high financial incentives, as with intrastate sales of natural gas, has not shown any tendency to boost production. But even if the enormous price rises and tax cuts envisaged by the Senate had some effect, it would be years off and at best would slow the decline in U.S. output — not reduce the need for imports.

That the oil giants are arrogant is a fact of the dog-bites-man variety: not news. They assume, indeed believe, that anything they do is right and patriotic. I, and I suppose most Americans, have long since come to regard the oil companies as so powerful that there is little point in thinking about them. One just shrugs when monopolists praise the "free market" and companies paying less in taxes than just about anyone demand more "incentives."

But even by oil company standards there is something staggering in the pretense that "freeing" the oil companies to produce more will meet a challenge as critical to this country as import dependence over the next decade. That was even more deserving of Carter's angry rhetoric than the greed that provoked his talk of war profiteering. (Could he please drop the war image, incidentally? Recent examples of its use, starting with the War on Poverty, are not very happy.)

The only effective answer to the import problem, in the critical short run, is to hold down the projected increase in overall American demand for oil. That means substituting other fuels and, most important, increasing energy efficiency. Americans use about twice as much energy per capita as countries with a comparable living standard, such as West Germany and Sweden.

The International Energy Agency surveyed its 18 members' energy-saving performance a year ago and rated America near the bottom. Among other things, it said, the U.S. continued to encourage gasoline consumption by having the lowest prices of the group — half Europe's or less — and by far the lowest fuel taxes. It used twice as large a share of its precious oil on transportation. The world is watching to see whether the largest oil consumer can at least keep its appetite from growing. Carter's program is by no means the only answer. But a cave-in to the oil industry's demand for more would invite disbelief — and disaster.

Health care planning going federal route

Omaha area health leaders have it right when they warn that federal hospital guidelines will become law in the years ahead. The guidelines from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) are aimed at critical aspects of the hospital health delivery system.

Those guidelines would cover the total number of beds in a community, the approved rate of daily occupancy, the number of various health delivery procedures and a host of other items. The objective is to make hospitals more cost efficient and health care, therefore, less costly.

While some guidelines might well be in order, hospital administrators are properly concerned over what the federal government may foist upon them. There is a serious question, for instance, whether HEW will give the consideration it should to states such as Nebraska that have a low density of population.

Very few hospitals in this state outside of Omaha and Lincoln could meet the suggested HEW guidelines. Other guidelines would be hard or impossible to meet by Lincoln and Omaha institutions.

This is not all bad, as some of the Omaha and Lincoln institutions might well do a better job of local planning, but it should be recognized that Nebraska is not heavily industrialized and populated. In addition to the guidelines themselves, there is the question of whether they will be voluntary or mandatory. They may start out as voluntary but our guess is they will soon become mandatory, perhaps made so by Congress next year.

If and when it happens, mandatory regulations will be an unfortunate development. One may argue such a development is or is not warranted but it will not be welcome.

While federal activity in the health care field has not been all bad, the track record leaves a lot to be desired. In reimbursements for health care for the elderly, Uncle Sam has been largely unresponsive to the problems and needs of the institutions.

In construction funds allocation, in support of health planning endeavors and in other areas, the federal government has been helpful but has more often than not promulgated conditions of distinct disservice to local entities. Some federal decisions in the health care area have been shamefully inefficient and costly.

We have no real solution for all this, only a sigh that it seems to be coming to pass. We would hope, however, that the new HEW guidelines can remain guidelines rather than law for a long enough time to at least test their effectiveness.

Bypass decision welcome

The Federal Highway Administration last week backed away from a scheduled lawsuit contesting the design of Lincoln's proposed West Bypass. Citizens to Preserve Wilderness Park were to have gone to court this Monday in an attempt to keep the highway out of the park. But at the last minute federal highway officials said they would not defend against the impending suit — which was dropped, for the moment at least.

It may be a little too early for park preservationists to celebrate. As the group's chairman, Dr. Paul Stoez, said, something as objectionable as the last design may be around the corner.

But now the Citizens to Preserve Wilderness Park will have a chance, along with other interested citizens, to provide input into studies of alternative bypass routes. New hearings will be held and the state department of roads will have to come up with new designs.

We have always thought it possible for roads officials to come up with a less objectionable route for the bypass if they really were interested in trying.

The sudden change in federal policy will give them that opportunity, and hopefully somewhere down the line community elements will not be polarized on what has been a controversial issue.

The change in federal policy is a welcome one; a further indication that the Carter administration is serious about trying to balance interests and that its ballyhooed environmental awareness is for real.

A Transportation Department spokesman said in Lincoln last week that the change was part of an administration push to stay out of parks and an attempt to build public confidence. Besides, said the spokesman, Ray Hogrefe, "We could lose the suit."

Whatever the reasons, the change in policy is welcome evidence the government is willing to listen.

Sour medicine for a greedy people

James Reston

San Francisco — When the President of the United States and the Big Oil boys start tossing thunderbolts at each other, that's the time to get out of Washington and across the continent as fast as possible.

It's also probably the best way to understand why there's so much disagreement on energy policy, among other things. For the country is just too damn big, different, and rich to imagine itself running out of gas or anything else.

Shortages? The evidence is clear on the surface that it is our surpluses and not our shortages that are choking and strangling us.

The end of the American frontier? Why, outside of a few little piddling strips of humanity along the coast and around the Great Lakes, one has the impression vaulting the continent that the whole country looks almost empty and unconquered.

In Washington, the tussle between Carter and the oil barons sounded like the opening shots in a long war, but it took place at 7:30 in the morning out here and at that time of day in these parts drivers cutting down to 55 miles per hour would probably be arrested for obstructing traffic.

Besides, the farther you get from Washington the more you realize that politics don't rate very high on the scale of popular American interests, especially at the end of the pro baseball and the beginning of the pro football seasons.

And this, of course, is what drives Jimmy Carter out of his peanut-pickin' cool. He blames the oil companies and the oil companies blame him. The press blames the Congress and the Congress blames the press. In fact everybody is blamed but the American people, who are obviously at the bottom of this whole unnecessary mess.

When the Arabs shut off the gas, we go crazy, and when Jimmy Carter tells us the independence and even the security of the country will be at stake if we don't cut the waste, we go fishing — at 70 miles an hour!

Behind all this amiable American confidence, however, are two serious questions: how to persuade a vast continental people to take reasonable precautions for their own future? And how to get effective action in the Senate of the United States, where any determined minority, with the acquiescence of an indifferent or divided public, can hamstring both a Democratic President and a Democratic Congress?

It can be argued, of course, that in his concept of an effective energy policy, President Carter was "too complicated," and in his management of this legislation he was at first too neglectful of Senate pride and finally two one-sided in his severe criticism of the oil companies.

But this is by nature a devilishly complicated subject, and even if he didn't stroke all the egos in the Senate — a formidable task — this does not relieve them of their duty to pass legislation equal to the magnitude of the problem.

After all, the business of the oil companies is to make money and the business of the President and the Congress is to make policy.

In this as in other controversies, Carter's back swing has been better than his follow through, but he has defined the energy problem in the starkest terms, which even the dullest of senators have understood. The problem is not so much that his definition of the crisis has been disproven as that his prescription is sour medicine for a nation of drivers drunk on gasoline.

He said, in effect, that we were a greedy and feckless people. Prices have gone up "drastically," he observed; there was potential "war profiteering"; and "this could develop with the passing months into the biggest rip-off in history."

This is fairly simple language. Carter has done everything except mount a horse and cry alarm in the night that "the Arabs are coming," but oil imports have almost doubled in four years, and the United States now imports more oil than all the European countries combined, on top of our own substantial production.

Clearly, the president decided the time had come to startle the people into attention — but out here in the sunshine, there is little evidence that he has succeeded so far.

On the day Carter started fighting back, sales of new cars by the nation's Big Four for the first 10 days of the new-model season were up 15.1 percent over the same period a year ago.

So it's little wonder what the President started shouting out the window. His clutch has been slipping for months, and he had to tighten it up or get run over.

'Time-saving' a matter of redistribution

Ellen Goodman

Boston — A few months ago, when a preening French official descended from his Concorde into Washington, he bragged to Tip O'Neill that he saved four, count 'em, four hours traveling supersonically.

At that point the Speaker turned and asked him, benignly, what he had done with the four hours he'd saved. The official, as the story goes, was taken aback, right aback into silence. This exchange stuck in my mind, and not because I'm snooping into the Frenchman's activities. I'm not that sort of reporter.

But it occurred to me that O'Neill's response was a nice healthy challenge to the time-saving obsession of our lives. I guess the Concorde is as good a place to begin as any.

It has taken the accumulated wisdom of centuries to build this plane, and what have we got? For one thing, a noisier airplane which uses more fuel to carry fewer people in less comfort from one continent to the other at greater expense. We call this peculiar achievement "progress" for only one reason: It does all this absurd stuff in a shorter amount of time than a conventional plane.

Saving time, it seems, has a primacy that's too rarely examined. From the Concorde to the microwave oven to the speed-reading class, we value saving time more than the way we spend it and more than the values we may sacrifice to it. At times we behave like the efficiency expert in "Pajama Game" whose rationalization for his life was simple: "For a time-study man to waste time/is a crime."

We tell ourselves that we are all busy people. Our lives are geared to the school bells and alarm clocks and factory whistles outside of our control. But on the whole, the time-saving devices — both mechanical and personal — that are supposed to help us save time, don't. They merely allow us to do more in the same number of minutes, leaving us with full schedules and the need to find more ways to save time.

With the aid of the plane, the official and the businessman can turn a two-day trip into a one-day trip. But they are usually faced with two one-day trips. The people who learn to speed-read don't spend less time reading; they just read more in the same time.

The machines that make it possible for us to do things that we could never do before — like cook a roast in a half-hour — also make it more likely that we will do things we never would have done before. Like cook that roast.

These things don't save time, any more than the assembly line saves the worker time.

There is actually no way to bank our minutes away. The best we can do, with the most sophisticated machinery products, is to redistribute those minutes. And, like the French official, we don't always do a good job of that.

We have even become so addicted to saving time that we forget to differentiate between the things we like to do (dining with our families, for example) and the things we hate to do (cleaning the oven). We efficiently shorten them all.

At the end of a busy day, families often get dinner "down to a science": the science of convenience foods, mixes, and 15-minute "gourmet" recipes. In some houses, dinner goes from the refrigerator to the dishwasher in less than an hour. Then, having saved all these minutes, rather than spending them with each other, we drop them like quarters in a television slot machine.

Either we spend more and more energy processing ourselves through our days, doing more and more in the same amount of time, or we throw away our "free time" like Daddy Warbucks.

It's not that I want to go back to ox carts, let alone wooden washtubs, but it seems to me that we ought to make some personal judgments about the machines that are pushed on us in the name of the clock. We have to ask: Is it really going to save time? And, as the Speaker would say, what am I going to do with the time I save?

Ultimately, time is all you have and the idea isn't to save it but to savor it. Like the man on the record, James Taylor, says, "The secret o' life is enjoying the passage of time."

Squirrels lament economy hodge-podge

William Safire

Washington — The Associated Press reported last week that the National Park Service trapped more than 100 squirrels in Lafayette Park, across the street from the White House. Officials explained that a drop in park attendance caused a peanut shortage for the squirrels, which have since gone on a rampage through the geranium plants, triggering the Park Department's reprisals.

That depressing item sent me to the Bernard M. Baruch Bench of Inspiration, located in the middle of Lafayette Park near Andrew Jackson's statue, to discuss the cruel pogrom with a group of my furry friends, long considered symbols of thrift. To me squirrels have been like small investors, wisely depositing acorns in safe high trees against the possibility of a cold winter.

"High interest rates are doing it!" chirped one, looking over his shoulder for a park attendant. "Always makes me want to disintermediate."

"The depreciating dollar is doing it!" insisted a second.

"Whenever the dollar drops, and I have a bunch of nuts in a tree, I feel as though I have to check my cache."

"The collapsing stock market is doing it!" said a third, angrily waving a chart from a branch. "An 18 percent drop in the Dow means we're in the Crash of '77."

An older squirrel, named "Pujo," who had taken peanuts from Baruch himself, shook his head from his perch on the railing and dismissed all these plaints as effects, not causes.

"My panic-stricken colleagues are wrong," he observed. "Only short-term interest rates have gone up since April, in order to hold down the rise in the money supply and to combat inflation. The long-term rates have held steady — consumer installment loans, mortgages, municipals — which means that long-term inflationary expectations have not gone up. It makes sense to raise the short-term rates in order to protect the long-term rates."

His younger associates fell silent, largely because they never knew what he was talking about. "As for the drop in the dollar, as valued against other currencies, that's not such a hot idea. It's what they want," Pujo pointed to the Treasury Department, on one side of the park, "because they think it will curb imports and reduce our trade deficit, but it will only make imports more expensive and fuel our inflation."

But what of the stock market — wasn't the 180-point drop the cause of the peanut-feeding tourist disappearance and the panic among the squirrels?

"Confidence is not lost because the market drops," Pujo stated slowly. "The market drops because confidence is lost."

And why has confidence been ebbing? The other squirrels came in close; they wanted to hear this, too.

"Very surprising" said Pujo, veering off. "The economy has vitality and dynamism. Since the spring of 1975, we've generated seven million new jobs, at a greater rate than ever before."

Then why was investment of capital in plant and equipment relatively weak?

"First," said Pujo, with a sigh, "managers discovered that the government cannot stop business cycles; that was a shock, so they're cautious, and don't know what to expect on tax policy. In turn, that reluctance to invest in new plant hurts productivity, which makes it harder for us to compete abroad, which adds to the trade deficit, which weakens the dollar, which makes everybody nervous."

"That's all very well," interrupted the young squirrel, who was angrily ripping up a geranium plant, "but I'll tell you why the rest of us have lost our confidence." He pointed to the White House. "It's him. I don't think he likes us."

Pujo blinked. Baruch would never have said that.

"One week, he says he's going to kill the capital gains incentive, and there goes investment," said the angry young squirrel. "Next week, he appoints every fresh-air fiend in the Nader stable, and that's got to mean more regulation and be bad for business. Then when he doesn't get what he wants from the Senate on energy price control, he goes into a temper tantrum like Nixon after Carswell and calls us profiteers."

"There is that populist strain," admitted Pujo. "But what worries me most is the way he leaps on his horse and runs madly off in all directions. One week tax reform, next week energy reform, next week welfare reform. I wonder if they've added it all up."

"What we need is reform-reform," said the young squirrel, furiously stripping the bark off a beech tree. "And a feeling that we have a few friends over there. Blumenthal zapped Lance — at least that big guy used to come across the street and feed us — and now Blumenthal is zapping Burns. And who's Blumenthal? Only the guy the UAW wanted to run for the Senate. That's no friend of the thrifty squirrel."

"Don't knock the Treasury secretary," said the shaken Pujo. "He's the only one who's not giving the President what he wants on punishing people for making money."

The dreaded park police began a squirrel sweep, scattering the group; I threw my raincoat over Pujo, hiding him until the danger passed, and later offered him a peanut in my palm.

He placed a tiny paw over his wildly beating heart. "Just set the bag on the bench and I'll get it when you leave," he squeaked. "My colleagues are right — we can't trust anybody anymore."

Pursuit of roots is continuing

By Joanne Farris

Alex Haley's great book, "Roots" and its offshoot TV special series have generated a lot of interest in some subjects that we've touched on in this column in the past.

Oral history projects to preserve on tape the recollections of the now-old are one example. Classes in digging through written records for family roots are another.

The pursuit of genealogy goes on. Libraries make local materials available to researchers. Genealogy societies show neophytes how to start tracing a family tree. Attics and basements are combed for records that may have been packed away long ago. The family Bible often proves to be a storehouse of family names and life dates.

Some people have responded to Roots by undertaking family projects that are a bit unusual. The Heritage Arts Festival I wrote about in a column last week highlights one out-of-the-ordinary pursuit of roots — through the favorite old crafts of the elder family members, who pass on the secrets of their skills to the younger generation. I met a Ukrainian-American woman who represents the third generation of her family to practice the art of Ukrainian egg decoration, and she has taught her niece and the niece's daughter, so five generations of that family have used this skill and passed it along.

Another young woman found a book of old family recipes. Inspired by discovery of this treasure, she has begun to collect favorite casserole and dessert recipes from her mother, grandmothers, and aunts, and as she builds her collection she shares the new recipes with her peers.

An older woman who has kept family recipes and uses them might make a Christmas project out of compiling a collection of the best old recipes adapted with modern instructions, giving a set of recipes written on 3 x 5 cards to each of the young adults in her family. (I started to write "Young women" but cooking seems to have great appeal to today's young men as well!)

One man I know who loves to garden and has tended with loving care the yard and garden of his home, which belonged to his father before him, has begun propagating favorite plants for his young-adult children to take with them as part of "home" when they establish their own places to live. He's working on rhododendrons, roses and dogwood, and on several of the family's favorite perennials.

Some of you who have seedlings from large plants in your yards might consider taking them up during fall planting time and offering them to relatives as true family roots.

Any of you who contemplate moving from a loved old home may want to transplant special favorites now to pots or tubs so that you can take some family roots with you to your new home when moving day arrives for you.

Music campaign added

Golden, Colo. (AP) — The Adolph Coors Co., which has traditionally soft-pedaled its beer, is launching a youth-oriented advertising campaign featuring four different styles of music and suggesting:

"Make it yours, make it Coors."

Officials say a radio and print media blitz will spread into all 14 Coors market states this month as the nation's fifth largest brewer gears up to bolster sales and meet encroaching competition from larger brwers.

The musical spots were prepared by Coors' in-house ad agency and taped at ABC studios in Nashville. They feature the same basic message with a backdrop of soft-rock, country-western, pop or modified soul music.

Coors has relied primarily on low-key advertising without music. Print advertising generally features pictures of the Colorado countryside and a well-chilled can or bottle of beer.

Baking powder budget turned into a shambles

Postcard

By Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — October days, brimming with fall sunshine. Roused this a.m. by the rousing voice of Peter Frampton, adored by the entire household.

I said: "Except me. Turn it down!"

Leafed through the morning paper to the daily horoscope. (I don't know why I do this. Five minutes later I couldn't tell you what it said.)

"Concentrate on finances. Be sure you have a grasp on your affairs and a budget set up."

That's good advice. A year ago I kept a record of out-of-pocket expenses. Mostly supermarket slips from the machine. The one the checker punches so swiftly I always wonder if she really hits the right key.

Each slip is printed "Let's Be Friends." Or, "Tell A Friend."

At the end of the month I added them up. After I got an average, I began drawing that much the first day of each month.

☆ ☆ ☆

Budgets are fun to play with. I set up budgets like a card table. I never know when one of the legs will collapse.

Once I had a "Baking Powder Budget." I got it out of the Ladies' Home Journal. The Journal was full of things like "How Cake Mix Saved My Marriage." It must have been some time ago because it started off, "Get 10 baking powder tins."

☆ ☆ ☆

"Get 10 baking powder tins," it said. "Label them with regular household expenses: Food, clothing, rent, entertainment, etc."

The hardest part of this budget was getting 10 baking powder tins. We baked like mad. Made our own pancakes and biscuits. I was stuffed with baking powder—it has a tendency to fire back at you.

But I was determined. I said: "We've got to have a budget or we'll all be in the poorhouse."

☆ ☆ ☆

I labeled the cans. I put a share of money in each. Let me tell you the whole thing turned into a shambles. With 10 cans of money, everybody dips into them.

"I had to get a new notebook," said the older moppet. "Do you want me to get an 'F'?"

The new notebook came out of the can marked "Rent." I replaced from "Doctor Bills" and hoped we'd all remain healthy.

The can of "Emergencies" went right away. We're always having emergencies. "Entertainment" went for—well, entertainment. A can of entertainment money is like a can of peanuts. You just can't let them alone.

We saw a lot of movies and ate a lot of popcorn. By and by I refilled "Entertainment" from "Food" and set up a charge account at a grocery store.

☆ ☆ ☆

I don't use baking powder tins now. I just stuff the money in my pocket. Somehow the money—the amount I worked out from the friendly supermarket slips—doesn't last.

"Be wary of hidden expenses." That was the advice in another budget I had.

I said: "The hidden expenses around here are for broken bikes and McDonald's hamburger binges. How about eating at home after school? And quit riding those bikes over curbs."

☆ ☆ ☆

A wise woman shopper told me: "It's not really hidden expenses. It's just that everything in the stores is going up."

Oh, and those baking powder tins. I refilled them the next month. They were empty at the middle of the month. So finally I just threw them away. Bought pancake ready-mix. And went down and got a loan from the banker.

Quest for brother battle against odds

John Friedrichs has one clear goal: to find his brother Gustave.

The pain is unbearable that comes from this realization of being alone.

The realization starts every morning when John Friedrichs awakens in the Salvation Army Adult Rehabilitation Center, where he is surrounded by walls that trickle with the loneliness of whose who have passed this way before him.

Before the day is over, he will study for his classes at Southeast Community College, where he is working to earn his high school diploma.

He will eat three meals prepared at the center's kitchen. Perhaps they will serve one of his favorites — fried chicken, corned beef and cabbage, Salisbury steak.

He will be the center's desk clerk between 11 p.m. and 6 a.m.

And he will think of new strategies to pursue in a quest that has occupied his life, off and on, for 12 years.

He wants to find the only person that he says has ever meant anything to him — his brother Gustave.

Friedericks is 33 years old. He has not seen his brother since he was 8.

The brothers were separated when they were placed in separate adoptive homes.

Friederichs does not know if his brother cares about him. But, on the other hand, he says he has no reason to believe that his brother doesn't want to see him.

Friederichs has taken his quest to attorneys, to state senators, to the State Welfare Department. He says he has tried to gather as much information as possible about his brother. but he still does not know where he is.

"I think I'm getting to be more or less a pain in the ass to them," he said. "But, anymore, I don't care if I am a bug in their oatmeal."

Frederichs is battling the laws which keep adoption and welfare records confidential. These laws are meant to guarantee privacy to the adoptive child and his family.

To Frederichs, the laws cause misery, for they keep him from finding his brother.

"I have been deprived of my right of pursuit of happiness," he said.

From his quest, Friedrichs has etched a portrait of his brother into his daydreams.

In those dreams, Gustave Friedrichs would be 31 right now. He would be about 5 feet, 9 inches, with dark brown hair, dark brown eyes, a fair complextion and a slender build.

Friedrichs believes — but he has no proof — that his brother grew up in Lincoln and attended the University of Nebraska. He assumes his brother has married. He probably has a family started by now.

John and Gustave Friedrichs lived a confused, battered childhood.

In 1946, their parents, on the advice of the Douglas County Juvenile Court, relinquished the children to the Lutheran Children's Home in Omaha.

Neighbors had complained that the children had been seriously neglected and abused.

The father said, in a newspaper article about his family, that a home with a floundering marriage was not a happy place for two wide-eyed, impressionable boys.

Gust J. Friedrichs was divorced in 1948 and remarried several months later. He then petitioned the Douglas County Court to return his children.

The Lutheran agency said that the abruptness of the move would damage the children.

Shortly before Easter of 1949, the court ordered the agency to return the children to their natural father.

An article in the Omaha World-Herald recounted the homecoming. There were pictures of the boys at home with their father, surrounded by eggs and bunnies.

"That's my brother — the one my father has his arm around," Friedrichs said.

The article was steeped in holiday hopefulness, and the feeling that, forevermore, the family circle would never be severed.

"I guess the article wasn't a very good prophecy," he said.

The second marriage also plunged into strife.

What Friedrichs knows about his second home came from things he read in his case history — that the physical surroundings were deplorable, the atmosphere filled with quarreling and obscene language.

Friedrichs said he received his case history file this year from the Lincoln Regional Center.

The reports said he was often beaten and teased because he was a slow learner.

Friedrichs doesn't remember the unpleasant atmosphere described by the report. "If you are used to something, and it's the only thing you've known, then it doesn't seem so bad," he said.

The reports also said he resented Gustave, who was the favored of the two children. Friedrichs worries that his brother remembers the resentment.

"If he's sore because I was resentful, I have repented of that at least a million times," he said.

In November, 1950, the father, thinking his son was mentally retarded, attempted to commit Friedrichs to the Beatrice State Home. The request was denied.

The pediatrician who conducted the medical examination said that Friedrichs was suffering from an emotional disturbance and should be taken from the home.

By mid 1951, both Gustave and John Friedrichs had been relinquished to the Nebraska Home for Children and Youth in Lincoln.

Gustave Friedrichs was 6 when he was placed in an adoptive home. John Friedrichs, who was 8, remained with the agency.

Although the separation happened long ago, Friedrichs blames it for mental problems that have hounded him throughout his life.

Social workers have told him that the emotional problems were caused not by the separation, but because he had been deprived of a healthy family environment.

Friedrichs says he doesn't know what is the right answer anymore. He doesn't care.

He only knows that he loved his brother when they were separated, and he says he loves him now.

He doesn't care how it happens, but he hopes some god, someday, will deliver him from his hell, which he says was not of his choosing.

When Friedridhs was 9, he was placed with an adoptive family. The placement did not work out, and, a year later, he was returned to the agency.

Friedrichs was placed in a foster care home the following yera.

He grew up in that home, although he didn't cause much trouble, he kept trying to run away.

He wouldn't come home after school. He was found in bus stops. He was found wandering around town.

When he was 14, he took a cab downtown, checked into a hotel, and presented the clerk an insufficient funds check for $4,000. The clerk, suspicious of Friedrich's youth and the large check, called the police.

When Friedrichs was 15, he was placed in the Nebraska Psychiatric Institute. Doctors diagnosed him as a "schizoid, withdrawn personality."

After he was released a few months later, he continued to run away from home.

Authorities decided Friedrichs needed long-term treatment. He was transferred to the Lincoln Regional Center.

Friedrichs was in the Regional Center for five years. After he was released, he moved to Omaha. He returned to Lincoln three years ago. Since his return, he has made his search a full-time project.

"Over the last few years, I have recovered enough emotionally to do some investigating," he said. "Before that, I was too shook up and confused."

Some have counseled him to temper his obsession. But Friedrichs says he can't do that.

"I'd like to forget and say it's all been like a bad nightmare," he said. "But I guess that's one of those things that isn't going to happen."

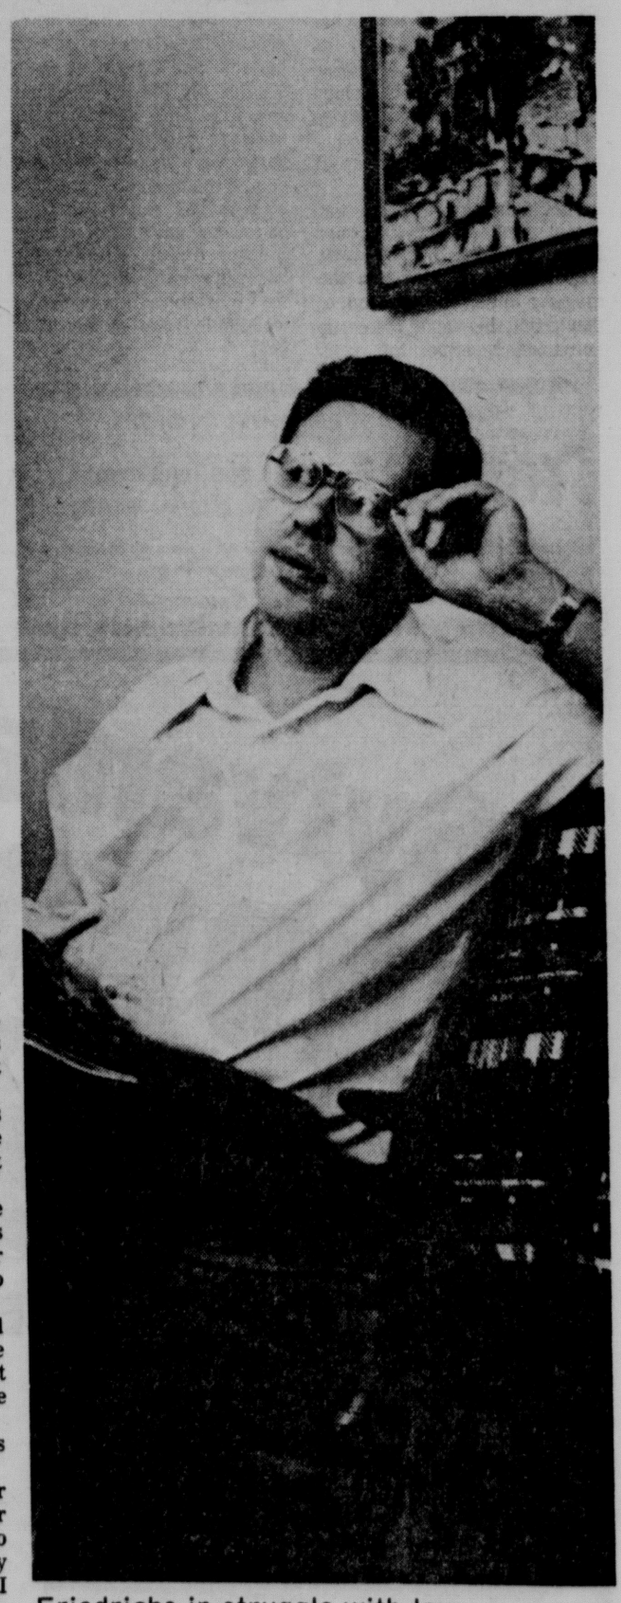

Friedrichs plans to have his high school diploma by the first of the year. "After that the future is hazy," he said.

He says he wants to continue his one-man lobbying attempts to inform others of the despair adoption laws have brought to him.

And he hopes something will happen so his story will be different from that of the rest of the lonely souls who have suffered a similar plight.

Maybe when he finds his brother, he will find love.

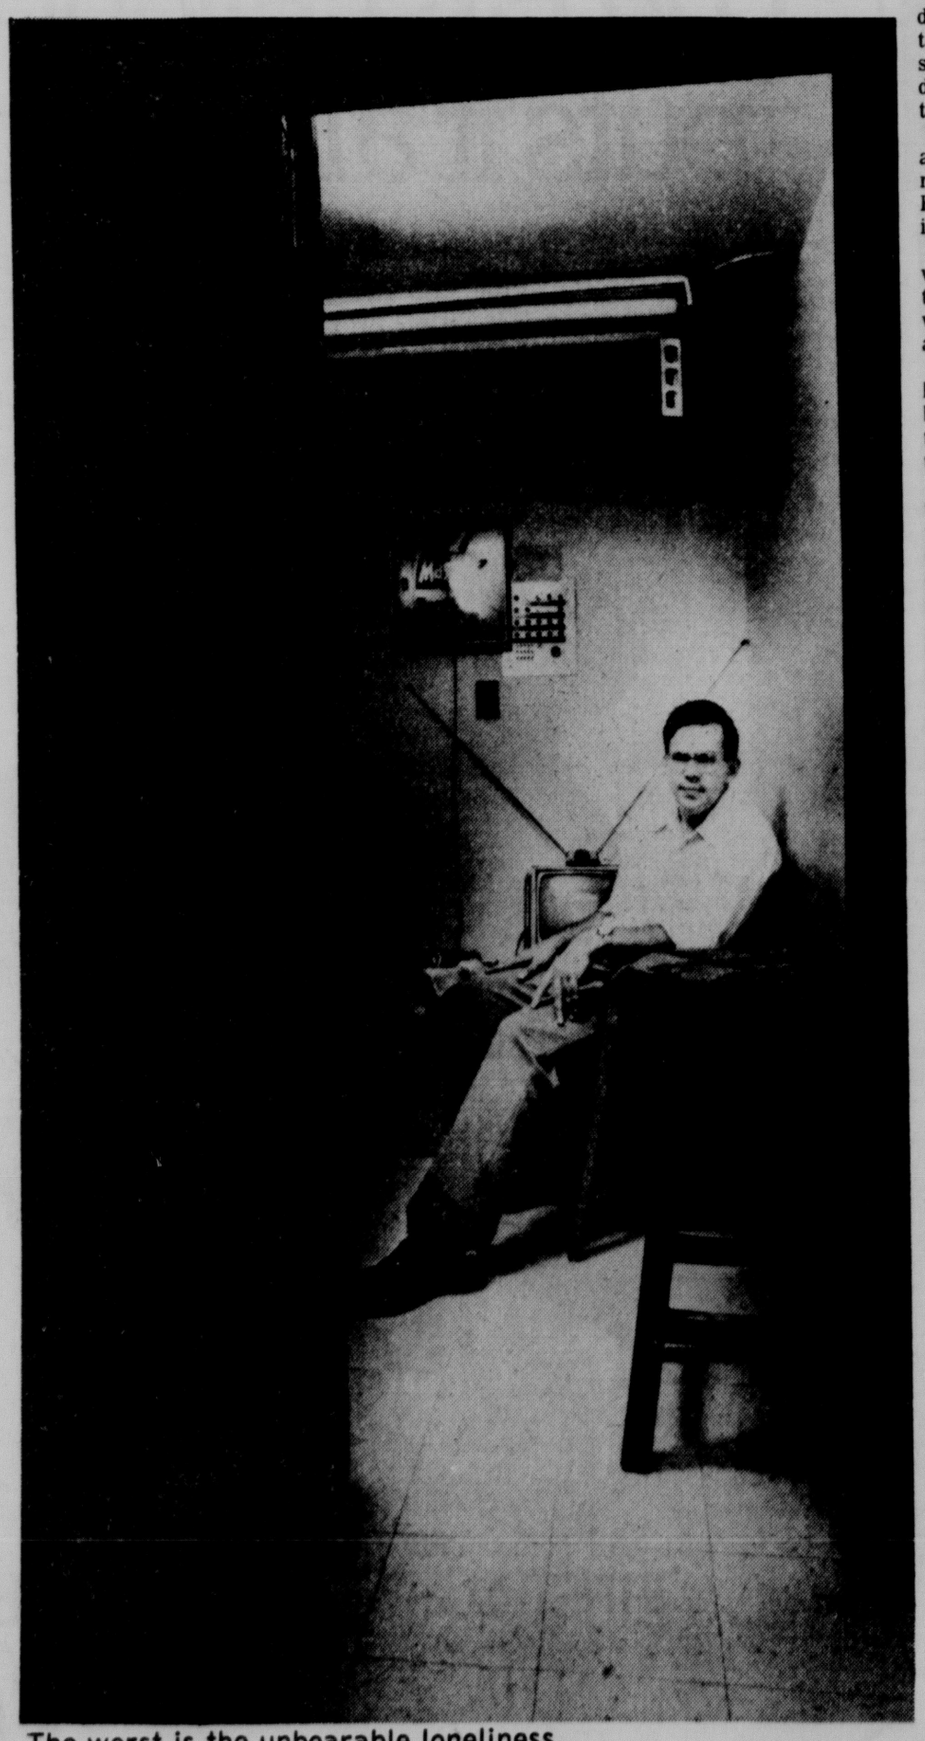

"I hope we would consider trying to rebuild our relationship," he said. "I do love him. I miss him very sincerely. He's the only one I have ever loved."

The worst is the unbearable loneliness.

Woman complains that men are inept, selfish, uncoachable lovers

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You certainly opened a Pandora's box when you ran those letters from women who said sex was messy, sometimes painful, not worth the trouble, and that they could live without it.

I feel sure I have a better than average husband, but men are inept as lovers. (I am not a lesbian, and I do not have any such tendencies.)

Men do not begin to understand women, psychologically or sexually. Their attitudes about sex are selfish. (Me first and then you, if you can manage it.) Men make women feel as though there is something wrong with them if they're tired or have a headache, or just don't feel like it when the men do.

If men knew as little about their jobs or their golf game, they wouldn't be able to earn a living or get off the first tee.

Worse, they won't listen, read or take suggestions. And if their sex life is a flop, they say that it's their woman's fault.

Sign me, Disappointed, Disgusted, Desperate and DEAD

DEAR D.D.D. AND DEAD: Your husband may be guilty as charged, but don't put all men in the same bag. My mail tells me that some men are wonderfully competent lovers. They're considerate, unselfish, tender and willing to read, listen and take criticism. All men are not alike any more than all women are. (Thank heavens.)

DEAR ABBY: The letters from wives who don't think sex is worth the trouble prompts this.

Can you imagine two people "in love," and expecting to marry, asking each other, "On a scale of zero to ten, how does your sex drive rate?" But such a determination, done preferably by outside counsel, would prevent many unhappy marriages.

Low (or no) sex drive does not apply only to women. Though folklore would have us believe that all men are highly sexed, it just isn't so.

For sexual compatability, zeros should marry zeros, and tens should marry tens.

GEORGE

DEAR GEORGE: It wouldn't work. Some zeros when properly motivated and coached become tens. And some tens, due to some of the other aspects of marriage, become zeros.

DEAR ABBY: I don't know who started the "no-bra" fad, but there ought to be a law against it.

I'm sure women aren't aware of the irreversible damage they do themselves by going without brassieres.

The pictures in National Geographic magazine of African tribeswomen naked from the waist up should tell us something. Their breasts hang practically to their waists because they have never worn any kind of support.

Today we see bosomy young women on our streets with T-shirts and nothing on underneath. They're even seen on TV. (Now I know why it's called the "Boob tube.")

Abby, please rewrite this and tell the bra-less babes of today they will be the drooping dames of tomorrow.

GOOD SAMARITAN

DEAR SAM: No "rewriting" necessary. It's true. And the technical name for that condition is "Cooper's Droop Syndrome."

DEAR ABBY: You often print letters from telephone operators complaining about what they have to put up with from the public. As a member of the "public," may I get in my 2 cents' worth?

I have never called directory assistance to find out whether I should use 10 large eggs instead of 12 small ones in an angel food cake, how to spell "conscientious objector," what Pat Nixon's real first name is, or the answer to any other such questions.

When I call MR. Jones person-to-person at home, and his wife answers saying he is not in, the operator inevitably asks, "Would you like to speak to MRS. Jones?"

Why on earth would I be calling MR. Jones if I wanted to speak to his wife? And with Mrs. Jones right on the line listening, what am I supposed to say, "No, I don't want to talk to her?" So I end up not speaking to the person I called, and paying person-to-person rates for it.

I realize that not all operators are alike, but customers aren't, either.

JOHN Q. PUBLIC

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for 18 years and have six wonderful children.

I have never been the suspicious type, but something has really got me thinking lately. About four months ago, my husband went on a business trip and stayed five days when he was supposed to be gone only three days. He phoned me from out of town and said he would be detained, but didn't explain why.

Well, ever since that trip, he has gone to confession every week! Before the trip he went to confession only twice a year. I am going crazy wondering what he has to confess.

Do you think that something happened on that trip that is sending him to confession? How should I handle it? Should I ask him? Or should I let the matter ride?

GOING CRAZY

DEAR GOING: Let the matter ride, and pray that he only cheated on his income tax.

Using magic number 13 yields much information

The bidding:

1♠	Dble	2♥	Pass
4♠	5♦	Dble

Opening lead - five of spades.

I have done a lot of bridge teaching in my day, but have always been baffled by why so many players have trouble making use of the number 13. Everyone knows that each player is dealt 13 cards and each suit has 13 cards, but far too many players don't utilize this fact of life as they should. If they would simply invoke the magic number 13 more often, they'd find the play of the cards much, much simpler.

Take this deal where East wins the spade lead and continues with a spade, which South ruffs high. Declarer now plays the ace of diamond, East showing out. It is only trick three, but declarer already has a vast amount of information at his command.

He knows from the play thus far that West started with one spade and four diamonds. He also knows from the bidding that West has at least five hearts headed by the ace (and probably the jack also) because West could not double without the ace and surely would not have bid two hearts with fewer than five of them. Ten of West's cards in three suits are thus known, leaving him with at most three clubs.

South now tries to take advantage of the situation. He realizes that if he simply draws trumps and plays a heart to the queen, he is likely to lose two heart tricks and go down one. To avoid this danger, he cashes the A-K of clubs, plays a trump to the ten and ruffs a club. This runs West out of clubs.

South then draws West's two remaining trumps and leads the king of hearts. West, who now has only hearts left, can do no better than take his ace and return a heart, thus enabling South to score his ten and in that way make the contract.

Court rejects death row appeals

Washington (UPI) — The Supreme Court Monday denied a hearing to two Nebraska death row inmates who claimed the right to have a jury determine their punishment as well as their guilt.

The justices acted in a brief order, without comment, on appeals by John Edward Rust and Richard D. Holtan, both facing death for murder.

The 1973 Nebraska law, enacted in an effort to conform to Supreme Court standards, gives the sentencing duty to the judge.

The appeal on the men's behalf by the National Association for Advancement of Colored People Legal Defense Fund said a jury, which represents society as a whole, should determine the existence of aggravating or mitigating circumstances in connection with a capital offense.

"That voice must be heard on the question whether life is to be taken in its behalf," the appeal said.

Also questioned was the failure of the State Supreme Court to compare the Rust and Holtan cases with 13 cases since 1973 where life imprisonment has been imposed.

Actual imposition of the death sentence is "caparicious" and thus violates the Constitution's ban against cruel and unusual punishment, the NAACP said. Noting that Nebraska has had only 20 executions since 1903, the appeal contended there is no way to distinguish between the few cases where death is imposed and the many cases where it isn't.

Rust was convicted of the 1975 murder of a civilian, Michael Kellogg, who was helping police catch him and another man following a robbery of a Hinky Dinky store in Omaha.

The appeal said it was pure luck that the fatal shot was fired by Rust and not by Ronald Ell, the other man, who was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Holtan pleaded no contest to first degree murder in the fatal shooting of Larry Loder, a bartender in the Dugout Bar in Omaha, which also was being robbed. He was sentenced to death by a three-judge panel.

The Nebraska Supreme Court called the act "wanton, deliberate, cruel and inexcusable."

The state court upheld both sentences Feb. 2, 1977, along with that of Erwin Charles Simants, convicted of murdering six members of the Kellie Family in Sutherland in 1975.

Chambers calls for death penalty reviews

By Don Walton
Star Staff Wirter

State Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha Monday called for State Supreme Court review of all criminal homicides commited in Nebraska since the effective date of the current death penalty law.

Under the Chambers proposal, which he will submit to the Legislature, the court would be required to set aside any death penalty under review if in cases involving "substantially similar facts and circumstances," no death penalty was pronounced.

Now, he said, the court reviews capital cases but "completely ignores homicides where the facts and circumstances may have justified filing of a capital charge, but for some reason, none was filed."

State law should be applied uniformly throughout the state, Chambers said, and "not be subject to the whim, caprice or idiosyncracies of prosecutors, juries or local judges.

"Since the death law is a statewide enactment, an offense which would not result in a death sentence in one portion of the state should not result in death in a different portion," he said.

"Since the Nebraska Supreme Court has formally announced that the same circumstances should produce the same result, the Legislature should statutorily require that the review undertaken by the court be extended to all criminal homicides and not just those which prosecutors decide (for whatever reason) to label capital offenses, as is now the case.

"If review and comparison are limited to cases where death is actually imposed, the base is too narrow and fails to take any cognizance of the multitude of similar cases where the perpetrator of the homicide never faces the risk of death because of the action by the prosecutor in not charging (murder in the) first degree."

Woman gas station attendant seriously wounded in holdup

Omaha (AP) — A 28-year-old Omaha woman was hospitalized in serious condition Sunday night after she was shot during a robbery at the gas station where she worked, police said.

Linda K. Larsen received shotgun wounds to the head and hand.

Police were seeking two teenagers, a boy and a girl, in connection with the incident. Sgt. Robert Olson said the pair got little if any money.

Yutan man dies in accident

Fremont (AP) — James A. Rasmussen, 25, of Yutan was killed Sunday night in a car-train accident near Fremont.

Authorities said Rasmussen's eastbound car was struck by a northbound Burlington Northern train south of Fremont in Saunders County. The victim was alone in the car.

The death brought Nebraska's 1977 traffic fatality toll to 276, compared with 313 on the same date a year ago.

First National again proudly presents...

Now in its 4th year, "Dress A Doll" is a program that brought special joy to some 350 needy children in Lincoln last Christmas. Each received a beautiful new doll...one that was stunningly attired in a very specially created and hand-crafted outfit.

Because of the marvelous response to the program the past 3 years, First National is again expanding "Dress A Doll" this year. The objective...to provide for fulfilling the dreams of 360 underprivileged youngsters this Christmas.

Here's how "Dress A Doll" works...

The dolls are supplied by First National Lincoln. The outfits are created by individuals of all ages who enjoy designing and making doll clothes and who also have a desire to bring special happiness to some needy child at Christmas.

To participate, you simply stop in at any of First National's three handy locations and pick up a doll—no cash deposit, no charge.

Take the doll home with you and fashion an outfit for it...fancy or bridal gown, knit and crochet, storybook character, baby doll, or a colorful costume worn in some foreign land.

When you have completed the outfit you have designed and tailored for your doll, bring the costumed doll to First National—any time prior to November 18.

All dolls will be displayed in the lobby of First National's Main Bank at 13th and M Streets from November 23 through December 15. Based on the decisions of a panel of judges, special awards will be made for various dress classifications and for those participants 15 years of age and under.

The outfitted dolls will then be donated, as they have in the past, to the Salvation Army for distribution to families of needy children at Christmas.

"Dress A Doll"...it's a fun way for you to help answer some child's dream at Christmas. We invite your participation.

Most current MERIT smokers have come directly from high tar cigarettes.

It's clear: low tar MERIT is delivering the kind of taste that can satisfy high tar smokers, the toughest "taste" critics of low tar smoking.

The reason is a real advance in tobacco technology that results in a way to boost natural tobacco flavor without the usual corresponding increase in tar.

It's called 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco.

MERIT and MERIT 100's are packed with this special tobacco.

And both were taste-tested against a number of higher tar cigarettes.

Overall, smokers reported they liked the taste of both MERIT and MERIT 100's as much as the taste of the higher tar cigarettes tested.

Cigarettes having up to 60% more tar!

Only one cigarette has 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco.

And you can taste it.

'Moderate' Bereuter 1st District GOP candidate

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

State Sen. Douglas Bereuter of Utica, a self-described political moderate, is the first Republican to enter the First District congressional race.

Bereuter, 38, a one-term state legislator, formally announced his candidacy Monday at a Lincoln gathering of friends and associates.

The First District seat is now held by Republican Charles Thone of Lincoln, who has announced his intention to become a candidate for governor in 1978.

Already in the race on the Democratic side is H. Bruce Hamilton, Lancaster county commissioner and a third party (New Party) candidate for the post in 1968.

Bereuter said the federal government, which is now viewed by many Americans as "an enemy, a bulky, unresponsive and alien government that does more harm than good to our daily existence," should be redirected to free the independent initiative of the individual citizen.

"America needs to rediscover the potential of its citizens," he declared.

Bereuter said he is, "by most people's reckoning, a moderate on the total political spectrum.

"I find myself in the middle, not by political design, but because that's where I'm ideologically comfortable.

"I do believe," he added, "that the country is a bit tired of the actions, ranting and raving of extremist groups on both ends of the spectrum."

Bereuter promised to pursue "an issue-oriented campaign."

Touching briefly on some national concerns, he said he will support "a strong, cost-effective national defense effort," employment opportunities for all who can work, "care and humane treatment" for those who need support, and "equal treatment under the law for all our citizens."

His legislative record, he said, will show concern for efficiency in government, budgetary responsibility, elimination of the "over-regulation" of small business, protection for the citizen's right to due process before government bodies, balancing environmental protection with job development, improved undergraduate education, improved programs for the mentally retarded and water conservation.

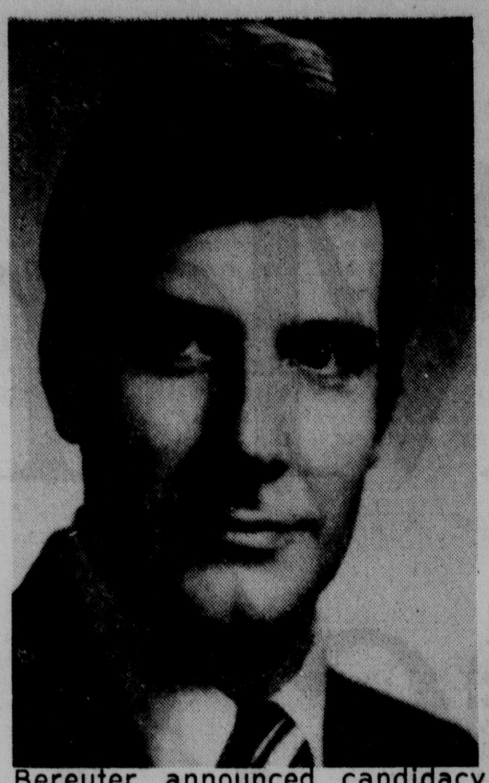

Bereuter was elected in 1974 to represent the 24th District in the Unicameral, which is composed of York, Seward and a portion of Polk Counties.

During the last Republican state administration (under Gov. Norbert Tiemann), he served as director of the state Office of Planning and Programming and as a division chief in the Department of Economic Development.

Some of his political and governmental associates from those days were on hand fir the announcement, along with a number of legislative colleagues.

If Bereuter is successful in his quest, he would become the second state legislator to move to the Congress in the space of two elections. Democrat John Cavanaugh won the Second District House seat in 1976.

Another senator who successfully moved from the non-partisan Unicameral into an elective partisan office, Harold Simpson, now a Republican member of the Public Service Commission, was on hand for the announcement.

Bereuter announced candidacy Monday.

Bereuter said it will be "very difficult" to raise sufficient funds to conduct an effective campaign during an election year which features so many races. Both the governorship and a U.S. Senate seat will be vacated by incumbents next year.

His own personal financial resources are "meager," he noted.

Bereuter has been a consultant in economic development and government organization and a part-time teacher at Kansas State University.

Corn harvest 40% done; soil moisture mostly OK

Nebraska's corn harvest moved ahead last week with 40% of the acreage now harvested, 10% ahead of schedule.

This was disclosed Monday in the weekly crop-weather report of the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Many farmers are harvesting as early as possible to minimize ear droppage due to corn borer damage, the service said.

Topsoil moisture in the state is now rated adequate or better in 85% of the counties and short in 15%. A year ago topsoil moisture was adequate in 38% of the state and short in 62%.

Subsoil moisture levels are now considered adequate in 86% of the counties and short in 14%. At this time last year, subsoil moisture levels were adequate in only 10% of the state and short in 90%.

Combining of grain sorghum accelerated slightly last week with over 45% of the crop reported harvested, 5% behind normal.

Freezing temperatures should aid grain sorghum growers by reducing the moisture content of grain to acceptable levels, the report said.

Soybean harvest advanced steadily with 40% of the crop harvested, compared to 75% a year ago.

Planting of winter wheat is virtually complete. Most of the wheat acreage is reported in good to excellent condition.

Range and pasture feed supplies are rated adequate in 96% of the counties and short in only 4%.

Rainfall received throughout the state during the past week included:

Judging teams place second

The Lancaster County 4-H team captured runner-up honors at the horse judging contest held in conjunction with the American Quarter Horse Congress in Columbus, Ohio.

The three-member team scored 1,900 points to trail a 4-H team from Michigan by 29 points. 4-H teams from Virginia and Ohio finished third and fourth, respectively, while a Connecticut FFA team was fifth.

The Lancaster County squad was led by Scott Shell, 16, of Raymond, who finished fourth overall individually with 642 points. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shell helped the team to fourth place in the contest's halter class by finishing 10th with 415 points.

Only two points behind Scott in fifth place overall was Lee Ann Hansen, 16, of 700 Wedgewood Drive. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Hansen led the team to a second place finish of 678 points in the performance class by accumulating 232 points, good for fourth-place individual.

The third team member, Suzie Larson, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Larson of 1143 Mulder Drive, had 618 points overall.

Meanwhile, the University of Nebraska-Lincoln livestock judging team took second place in the halter class at the intercollegiate horse judging contest at Columbus.

The Nebraskans finished behind Black Hawk College of Moline, Ill., as the runnerup among the 43 teams entered.

The squad was led by Duane Nelson, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eudell Nelson of Newman Grove, who finished fourth overall among the 135 individuals participating in the contest. The senior animal science major was eighth in the halter judging, in which the team was second.

Greg Ford, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sinis Ford of Cody, a senior ag honors and ag education major, was eighth high individual overall.

Steve Pritchard, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Pritchard of Spalding, a senior animal science major, led the team in the halter class judging by finishing fourth.

The UNL team was fifth in judging the performance class.

Zorinsky criticism gets no reply yet

Omaha (AP) — Sen. Edward Zorinsky said Monday he hasn't heard anything from his colleagues yet about his latest slam at the Senate, which has been called the world's most exclusive club.

zorinsky, however, isn't the Senate's biggest fan. The freshman Democrat from Nebraska has said he almost resigned earlier this year when he became disenchanted with the chamber's procedures.

And on Sunday, Zorinsky said presiding over the Senate sometimes is like being in charge of a bowling banquet.

"I have yet to hear about it," Zorinsky said in a telephone interview with Nebraska Associated Press Broadcasters. "I don't know if they are aware I called a session of the Senate comparable to a bowling banquet."

Zorinsky attracted national attention last month when he returned more than $300,000 to the treasury. The money was for his staff and office and for paying his employes. Zorinsky said he didn't need that much money — so he gave it back.

The Nebraska Democrat, a former Omaha mayor, has been criticizing Senate procedures since his election last year. During the recent filibuster centering on natural gas deregulation, Zorinsky took a couple of turns presiding over the chamber.

He said it takes too long for a roll call to determine if a quorum is present.

"I was taught to count to 51 at Central High School," Zorinsky said, "and I could look out there and see whether 51 senators were in the chamber . . . It took me about three minutes compared with 15 minutes for a roll call."

Zorinsky last week became the first Nebraskan to win the Golden Gavel Award, which is given to senators who log more than 100 hours as presiding officer.

Juelfs praises efforts to gain farm attention

Republican gubernatorial candidate Stan Juelfs of Kimball Monday praised farmers and ranchers for organizing efforts to make the public aware of agricultural needs.

"At the state level, we need an aggressive governor who will lead an effort to reduce farm property taxes while establishing Nebraska as a leader in the development of alternative markets for commodities," Juelfs said.

An example of alternative markets would be production of gasohol, he said.

The farmer, Juelfs said, "deserves at least the cost of production in return for being the most efficient ag-producer in the world.

"Like any other businessman, the farmer is entitled to a profit. This is not the case now because of high production costs and low commodity prices."

Juelfs will address a student government meeting at the University of Nebraska Union Wednesday at 7 p.m.

Thone is cosponsor of 30% tax cut bill

Congressman Charles Thone said he has cosponsored a bill to cut all federal individual taxes by 30% over the next three years.

That would be coupled with "a roof on federal spending through a congressional resolution that, except for declaration of a national emergency, provides that next year's spending shall not exceed that for this fiscal year," the 1st District Republican said.

"A tax cut is the best kind of tax reform," Thone said.

And, based on past experience, he said, tax cuts tend to increase federal revenues by stimulating the growth of the American economy.

Upgrading Weather Service jobs may affect G.I.—Smith

Grand Island (UPI) — Rep. Virginia Smith, R-Neb., said Monday a decision to upgrade jobs at the Tulsa, Okla., Weather Service station could lead to similar action at Grand Island.

The Civil Service Commission agreed to upgrade the job rating for meteorological technicians at Tulsa, she said.

The decision will be used as a precedent to ask for upgrading of positions at the Grand Island office, Mrs. Smith said. A decision is expected by the end of the year.

Mrs. Smith and two representatives of the Grand Island office earlier this year protested a decision to downgrade some jobs at Grand Island from GS-11 to GS-10.

Student newspapers, yearbooks are judged

Student newspapers and yearbooks received awards during the 46th annual convention of the Nebraska High School Press Association (NHSPA) and the Journalism Division of the Nebraska School Activities Association held Monday.

More than 700 participated in the seminars held at the University of Nebraska Center for Continuing Education.

The annual NHSPA Community Service Award was won for a second consecutive year by Kearney High School.

Winners in the NHSPA newspaper competition were:

Class A — 1. Omaha Westside; 2. Ralston; Honorable Mention, Fremont. Class B — 1. Beatrice; 2. Minden; Honorable Mention, Alliance. Class C — 1. Geneva; 2. Elgin Pope John XXIII; Honorable Mention, Callaway. Mimeograph — 1. Kimball County; 2. Dorchester; Honorable Mention, Palmyra.

Winners of the NHSPA year book competition were:

Class A — 1. Omaha Westside; 2. Lincoln High; Honorable Mention, Fremont and Hastings (tie). Class B — 1. Alliance; 2. Gering; Honorable Mention, Blair. Class C — 1. Louisville; 2. Hyannis; Honorable Mention, Wahoo Neumann.

Recount slated in York County one-vote race

York (UPI) — A recount is planned Wednesday in the recall election of the York County Board to test the one vote that separates a challenger and an incumbent.

Challenger Norman McDuffee nipped incumbent Stanley Diehl, 417-416, after the votes were tallied Friday, County Clerk Evelyn Folts said.

If McDuffee's victory stands, two of the five county board members will be unseated. Three incumbents were returned to the board and one was easily defeated.

Judge orders another round of Beatrice State Home arguments

Associated Press

The question of who will care for hundreds of retarded Nebraskans now in the Beatrice State Home will be back in the courts in about six weeks.

U.S. District Judge Albert Schatz of Omaha has ordered both sides to prepare for another round of arguments in late November or early December. Several of the institution's residents and the U.S. Justice Department are plaintiffs. The Nebraska attorney general's office is defending Gov. J. James Exon and his administration.

In 1975 Schatz ordered a panel set up to oversee transfer of residents from the state institution to community-based mental retardation programs.

The panel disbanded and the legal solution fell apart when the 1976 Legislature refused to fund it.

In documents filed with the court, the plaintiffs ask Schatz to order Exon to appoint another expert panel from among nominations made by both sides. Money should be taken from other state agencies to fund it if necessary, they contend.

The panel should identify at least 300 of the center's 990 residents whose conditions don't require institutional care and transfer them to facilities run by the state's six regional retardation programs, the plaintiffs maintain.

In addition, the plaintiffs ask Schatz to:

—Stop all capital construction and remodeling of facilities at Beatrice that won't be needed for those left at the home, including five new cottages being built at a cost of $900,000.

—End center policies and procedures they say frustrate attempts to transfer residents.

—Prevent new admissions to Beatrice or the Lincoln and Hastings Regional Centers unless no community-based programs are available.

—Prohibit physical restraint of patients, with exceptions.

—Protect residents from "brutality and physical abuse" by center staff, and to have the State Patrol investigate suspected abuse.

—Provide residents with at least six hours a day of programmed activities.

The plaintiffs say the cost of the order would be at least $3.76 million to bring Beatrice into compliance with federal standards, about $300,000 to meet state fire and safety standards and hospital accreditation guidelines and an unspecified amount from improvements in the community-based programs.

Schatz also is requested to add the state of Nebraska, Treasurer Frank Marsh, state Auditor Ray A. C. Johnson and Public Welfare Director Eldin Ehrlich as defendants.

Assistant Atty. Gen. Mel Kammerlohr filed the state's response Monday, asking the court to adopt the state's own plan for transferring residents.

The defendants admit that the agreement under Schatz's earlier order has faltered, but they contend they should not be blamed for the Legislature's decision not to provide necessary funding.

About 150 Beatrice residents already have been moved to community programs, and about 150 more have been identified and are awaiting placement, the state claims.

However, the state claims the court cannot order the regional retardation programs to accept Beatrice residents since the regions are not parties to the case.

The goal of reducing the Beatrice center's population to 250 by October 1978 is called "unreasonable" in the state's argument.

New construction at Beatrice is described as minimal and the state contends written policies have been adopted prohibiting staff from physically abusing residents.

Both sides indicated they plan to call about 50 expert and lay witnesses each, and the proceedings are expected to last two to three weeks.

Federal block grant plans get final nod

By Dean Terrill
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Beatrice — Final plans for a $400,000 U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development community block grant were approved by the city council Monday night.

A review of the proposal by HUD community development specialist Keith Schmidt brought quick council action, including a redesignation of the area eligible for housing improvements. It is anticipated that about 20 homes will be upgraded from an $80,000 share of the grant.

Another $27,500 is alloted for acquisition and demolition of houses within the so-called "impact area" and $10,000 is set aside for minor repairs. The area includes about 13 square blocks encompassed by Scott, Holbrook, 7th and 12 Sts.

Administrative Assistant Terry Doyle said HUD asked the designation of a smaller area than the original so that improvements would be more evident. Hopefully, some interior work can begin this winter.

The council also voted to give first priority to property owners in the category of "very low" income. After a 90-day period, persons of low income will be eligible to apply. Income divisions and other criteria will be decided by a committee.

The largest part of the grant, $242,500, will be used for public works projects over a larger area. A balance of $40,000 will go to administrative expenses.

On another matter, the council accepted the recommendation of the planning and zoning commission in denying a change of zoning to allow Alvin Rehm to build an auto repair shop at 920 W. Mary. Although he had the approval of all property owners within a 300-foot radius, the council felt spot zoning would be undesirable because of surrounding residences.

The council, also:

—Approved $16,165 bid of Maurstad-Zimmerman Insurance Co. for Workmen's Compensation insurance.

—Approved $5,374 bid of Maurstad-Zimmerman for auto fleet insurance.

—Approved appointment of Richard Calhoun to board of public works.

—Accepted resignation of William Arterburn and Ronald Carrel from volunteer fire department.

—Briefly discussed possible U.S. 77 east bypass as recommended by Gage County supervisors and referred to planning and zoning commission for study.

—Approved proclamation of Oct. 24 as United Nations Day.

Late aid has schools borrowing

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

School districts may be getting some answers to their state aid questions within the next few days. But there will be no money for another four to six weeks.

And while they wait many of the districts are telling the State Education Department they'll have to borrow money or use reserves to operate.

An attorney general's opinion on how state aid should be distributed to Nebraska's 1,100 school districts was mailed to Education Commissioner Anne Campbell Monday morning, said Atty Gen. Paul Douglas.

He would not release information from the opinion until it had been received by the State Education Department and Dr. Cambell said Monday afternoon that the opinion had not yet arrived.

The State Education Department asked for the opinion more than a month ago when it became apparent that a petition drive to suspend the current state aid law would succeed.

The law would have increased state aid to local schools from last year's $55 million a year to $75 million this year and $115 million annually in the future.

But the successful petition drive left unanswered such questions as how much money should be distrubuted this year and what the distribution formula should be.

Even with an attorney general's answer the payments probably will not be ready for another four to six weeks, said M. L. Christensen, state aid supervisor for the State Education Department.

The first of the nine payments normally go out to state districts by the Oct. 20 deadline. The delay this year is causing problems for districts throughout the state, Christensen said.

Norris School District will begin borrowing money Tuesday because of the state aid payment delay, said Superintendent Dennis Nosal.

The district received $328,256 last year in state aid and anticipated $380,000 this year under the new formula, he said.

Nosal, like other superintendents, would not only like the first payment but would also like some answers about the amount of money his district will receive.

"If I had an answer I could start planning," he said.

Waverly, Crete and Milford districts are also borrowing money for bills earlier than normal this year, which superintendents blame on the delay in state aid payments.

Crete received $290,000 in state aid last year, Waverly about $306,000 and Milford, $140,000.

"This (delay) just adds to our problems," said Crete Superintendent Dale Braynard.

Both Lincoln and Malcolm districts are dipping into cash reserves, but do not anticipate borrowing.

"We carried over a pretty good cash reserve that we thought would be able to pick up the slack," said Malcolm Superintendent Leslie Tyrrell.

Lincoln, which received $89,000 for the first state aid payment last October, will have to dip into cash on hand on meet expense, according to Robert Den Hartog, associate superintendent for business.

"That means a loss of income on investments and idle funds," he said.

Minority college enrollment grows faster than total

Minority enrollment has increased faster than total enrollment at state and land-grant universities in recent years, according to a national survey of U.S. colleges and universities.

Minority students made up 15.2% of the total enrollment in fall 1976, compared with only 11% in the fall 1972, said the survey of 131 state universities and land-grant colleges.

Full-time minority enrollment grew by 16.8%, from 176,776 to 206,523, between 1974-76, while total full-time enrollment increased only 6.3% during the same period, according to the survey conducted by the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges.

Black students accounted for almost half the minority enrollments in 1976 and 6.7% of the total enrollment, with Hispanic students ranking second.

The number of predominantly white campuses with black enrollments of more than 1,000 has grown steadily from four schools in 1968 to more than 40 last year.

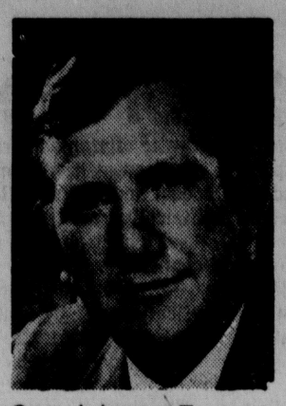

Hastings mayor again charges courses duplicated

Hastings (UPI) — Mayor Robert Allen has repeated his claim that the Central Technical Community College area is duplicating courses at its Hastings and Grand Island campuses.

At a news conference Monday, Allen called for some type of state investigation into what he called "an expensive waste of taxpayers' dollars."

Allen said the most expensive duplication was in data processing, auto mechanics, welding technology, electronic technology and construction technology courses.

Allen said area President Dr. Chester Gausman was "without a doubt an empire builder" and accused Gausman of "not being completely open" about moving the central offices from Hastings to Grand Island.

Gov. J.James Exon
. . . had gland removed.

Governor 'fine' after operation

Gov. J. James Exon was "still doing find" Monday night after having an enlarged parathyroid gland removed earlier Monday.

A spokesman at Bryan Memorial Hospital said the operation, which took about an hour and a half, was a success. The surgery was performed by Dr. Francis Neumayer.

When he announced he was going to have the operation last month, Exon said he wasn't sure if just one or all four of the parathyroid glands would have to be removed.

The glands are located near the thyroid gland in the neck and secrete a harmone which is important in the control of the calcium-phosphorus balance in the body. One of the governor's glands was permitting too much calcium to enter the bloodstream.

Exon is expected to remain in the hospital about five days, followed by an unspecified recovery period at home.

Soil conditioner firm required to list product's ingredients

United Press International

The State Justice Department Monday said a company that wants to market a soil conditioner in Nebraska must include a complete listing of ingredients on the product's label.

A firm that manufactures a soil conditioner had told the State Agriculture Department that a complete listing of ingredients, required by Nebraska law, might divulge trade secrets about the product. The patent application for the conditioner is still pending.

Roger Sandman, director of the Agriculture Department, requested the opinion.

State Attorney General Paul Douglas and Assistant Attorney General Robert Bartle said Nebraska law requires ". . . the percentage of every ingredient present in each soil conditioner" to be included in the company's application to register the product in the state.

The firm had asked Sandman to approve, among other things, a label that lists only the total percentages of certain ingredients. That procedure would identify each of three ingredients, but not their individual percentages.

The opinion stated, "one of the clear purposes of the statute is to inform the purchaser of the composition of the product which he is buying.

"The (agriculture) director is authorized . . . to carry out the legislative intent of the act. Any discretion left to the administrator (Sandman) must not vary with legislative intent."

The opinion said the company's decision to market the product in Nebraska, before obtaining a patent on the formula, "entails certain risks in the first place."

In such a case, the opinion said, the company's right to protect the product's formula must yield to the right of the state to promote fair trade by requiring "the nature of the product" to be identified.

6 homes burglarized, vandalized

Six homeowners in southeast Lincoln told police they were burglarized or vandalized Friday night.

While the largest amount reported stolen was $20, most victims reported one of their outside doors was kicked in and one or more rooms were ransacked.

The victims, as listed on police reports, are: Robert Davis, 1825 Morningside, had $20 in coins stolen; Lenora Walter, 1828 Morningside, nothing taken, door kicked in; Bernice Fisher, 1810 Riviera, $12, door kicked in, first floor ransacked; Patricia Chilwood, 1828 Riviera, $18.50, door kicked in, first floor ransacked; John Cross, 1831 Riviera, nothing taken, door kicked in, living room ransacked; Gary N. Odvody, 1926 S. 58th, door kicked in, house ransacked.

State Digest

Fund tops $1 million

York (AP) — York College raised $1.2 million in cash and pledges in what telephone officials say is one of the largest two-way conference calls on record.

The college hooked up with 91 locations in 22 states over two lines to raise the money for its endowment and a possible start on a new science building.

Bond schedule stiffens

Omaha (AP) — Omaha judges have set a new and stiffer bond schedule for persons arrested on misdemeanor charges.

Bonds for loitering and prowling are $500 instead of $250. Nebraska has a 10% bond provision which means those arrested for that offense are required to post $50 instead of $25.

Liberty coed queen

Marilyn Barr of Liberty, 20, was crowned 1977-78 queen of the Block and Bridle Club at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln during the club's annual alumni dance.

First runnerup was Deborah Uhrig of Hemingford.

Winitz to start lectures

Omaha — The University of Nebraska Medical Center's Meyer Children's Rehabilitation Institute will kick off a series of monthly lectures on communication problems in children with Dr. Harris Winitz Thursday night.

A professor of speech and hearing science at the University of Missouri at Kansas City, Dr. Winitz will talk on "Comprehension and Production Reconsidered."

Taxi fare hike sought

Omaha (UPI) — Four Omaha taxi companies have filed an application with the Nebraska Public Service Commission to increase fares. The companies are Hunt Transportation, Inc., doing business as Happy Cab, Safeway Cabs, Checker Cab Co. and Yellow Cab Co. of Omaha.

17 Viet doctors practicing

Omaha (AP) — Nebraska now has 17 practicing Vietnamese doctors, according to Dr. Margaret Faithe of the University of Nebraska Medical Center.

Dr. Faithe, who has headed training operations for the doctors, said two other physicians should begin work soon and another 13 are in residency programs, English classes, or final preparations for the state licensing examination.

Mary Kay Evans of Albion, who helped recruit the doctors, said that, two years ago, Nebraska communities seeking doctors "were told we were way in over our heads, that we'd be fortunate to have five or six licensed in two years

"We just decided, 'All right, this is what's got to be done. Let's dig in,' " she said. "After we had 11 licensed, we knew we'd done something we could really be proud of."

A group called MEDIC, (Medical Education Development in Communities for Vietnamese Physicians), was formed by 22 communities.

The communities have offered the 32 doctors and their families places to live, help in setting up practice and support in getting the families on their feet in a new land.

Geologist cold-shoulders iceberg idea

Omaha (AP) — Sam Treves has nothing against icebergs, but he is opposed to U.S. taxpayers putting up the money to tow them to a desert.

The proposal was recently advanced at a meeting at Iowa State University.

A geologist, he thinks the icebergs should remain where they are. And, he thinks he speaks with authority, as he has been to icebergland 10 times in the last 17 years.

Treves, who lives in Lincoln, is chairman of the University of Nebraska geology department.

Treves first went to the Antarctic in 1960. He gave his views on icebergs to an Omaha meeting of the Audubon Society.

Surprise patrons, restaurateurs told

By Gerry Switzer
Star Staff Writer

Carry-out food service is where the future lies for restaurants across the country.

Take-out service will not replace the regular sit-down restaurant dinner operation but merely be an added service demanded by consumers.

Jaap ter Poorten, director of food service operations for the restaurant division of Bloomingdale's department store, told Nebraska restaurant owners and managers Monday that dinner at home is very popular today — as long as that dinner is already prepared.

He said consumers want meals which are ready to eat with minimal preparation such as popping a dish into the microwave oven for a few minutes. Restaurants can provide this kind of food service and increase sales at the same time, ter Poorten said.

When consumers can have dinner at a restaurant and at the same time order a quiche or some specialty main dish or dessert from that restaurant to take home and freeze for a future meal, they will take advantage of such a service.

Bloomingdale's, along with its many other successful innovations for retailing food services, is now producing "little Brown Bag" lunches for the calorie-counter.

The small brown shopping bags with "Little Brown Bag" imprinted on the side contain a choice of a 300, 400 or 500 calorie lunch which may be ordered by a customer and picked up for lunch on the run or to eat at a pleasant outdoor spot, ter Poorten explained.

Bloomingdale's famous 40 Carrots "healthy" food restaurant is popular because it advocates health foods and gets away with it by taking the "very serious" and "far out" or "hippie" connotations out of eating health foods.

And 40 Carrots, which became famous for serving soft-frozen yogurt, has extended its operation out on the streets of New York with frozen yogurt trucks which serve neighborhoods just as the Good Humor ice cream truck has for many years, according to ter Poorten.

Bloomingdale's literally brings people into its store just for the food service, ter Poorten says, adding that future plans call for a shish kebab bar in a display window to pull in pedestrians to the store.

According to the trade magazine, "Institutions," within three years ter Poorten has turned the food service at Bloomingdale's eight stores from subsidized tea rooms into $7.5 million moneymakers.

"People come to Bloomingdale's to see what's going on," he said, emphasizing the importance of restaurant's making food service attractive to the customer because of the unexpected.

He also stressed getting the customer involved by surprising them.

Menus should be kept simple so the food itself will be a pleasant surprise and there always should be something special which doesn't appear on the menu.

In addition to keeping menus simple, restaurant operators need to gear their menus more toward the female customer.

Traditionally menus have been directed toward the male customer but today's women are regular customers and many of the decisions on where a couple or family will eat, ter Poorten said. He added that advertising should also be geared to the female customer.

He suggests restaurants do more than merely saying hello and taking the name of customers waiting in line to be seated.

Bloomingdale's offers customers a complimentary glass of wine, or a guacamole appetizer or shrimp while they wait.

He also suggested changing the routine, stagnant, imagination-lacking restaurant by having self-service areas which are not limited to salad bars.

Food service areas which offer meats in one corner, salads in another, fish in another and pastries in still a separate area are popular with customers and cut down on overhead costs since fewer employes are needed, he said.

"The customer loves it because he or she is being fed immediately," he said.

According to "Institutions," Bloomingdale's flagship Manhattan store outdistances every competitor in the country, with annual sales at $350 per square feet, while 40 Carrots tops that with $525 per square foot.

But ter Poorten notes risk is involved in any change until customers become accustomed to changes. Such changes must be regionalized just as the fast foods franchises are learning that fried chicken and hamburgers must offer some regionalization in their menus to meet the needs of the consumers of that area.

Citing an example of the Snack Shop in Bloomingdale's, ter Poorten said three years ago it was the typical department store dining room catering to the chicken pot pie crowd.

"It was stagnant, lacking in imagination and out of step with Bloomingdale's pacesetter image," he said, adding that by taking risks this image was changed.

"We removed the pot pie from the menu and put in chilled cucumber soup, croissants and a liver pate," he said.

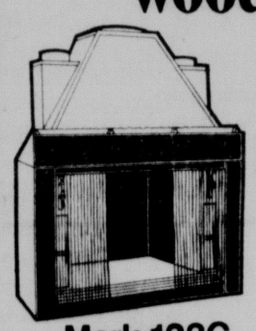

"The old patrons almost killed me . . . they literally screamed when we discontinued the rice pudding."

But now the snack shop attracts the 25 to 40-year-old market instead of a few elderly matrons, he noted.

Ninth tavern added to police scrutiny

George's Tavern at 2555 Cornhusker Hwy. has been added to the list of taverns which the City Council intends to watch closely.

There are now nine taverns for which the council has requested three-month checkups to monitor the number of disturbances and other violations. The nine taverns are those which had bad records in the past year.

In other busienss, the council took the following actions:

—Agreed to delete storm sewer requirement on special permit for Villa Apartment.

—Ordered construction of the following districts: paving district 2408, sewer districts 1052, 1051, 1050 and water districts 1039 and 1038.

—Created ornamental lighting district 228.

—Amended municipal code to permit pool tables in liquor establishments whether or not they are restaurants and establishing a special permit system for location of the pool tables.

—Delayed action on final plat of Lohse Add.

—Delayed action on final plat of Cox Estates.

—Delayed action on amending municipal code by adding provisions relating to the disabled.

—Amended municipal code to allow special permits for free-standing signs in M restricted district.

Council endorses no delay on Old Cheney bridge

The City Council Monday urged there be no further delays in construction of a bridge on Old Cheney over Salt Creek.

County Board Chairman Bruce Hamilton said last week he was going to ask for a month delay because the bridge should be four-lane if it follows the Comprehensive Plan, instead of the planned two-lane bridge.

The bridge, labeled the worst in the county, has been closed for months because it is unsafe.

Hamilton said, however, that he does not want to install a two-lane bridge at a cost of $225,000 if it later turns out a four-lane bridge should have been built.

Road planners say the bridge should be four-lane if Old Cheney is tied into the proposed West Bypass highway around Lincoln, slated for construction in the 1980s.

Car pool office extended

The City Council agreed Monday to extend the life of the Car pool/Van pool Program for another year at a cost of $65,000.

The amount is a reduction from the $78,000 program requested by Mayor Helen Boosalis, but is an increase from the $40,000 tentatively set by the council last summer.

By agreeing to the $65,000 program, the council is pending $4,000 in city matching funds and accepting $2,500 in funds raised by county government. Ninety per cent of the program's cost is paid under a federal program designed to encourage energy-saving transportation methods.

Machinery claimed defective in worker's $1.5 million suit

An Auburn man has filed a $1.5 million lawsuit in U.S. District Court over an accident he suffered while working in a metal foundry in 1974.

Robert A. Lueders is suing two companies involved in the manufacturing of a casting machine that was purchased by Magnolia Metal Corp. of Auburn.

The lawsuit said the casting machine, manufactured by Malcom, Ogilvie & Co. of Dundee, Scotland, and an attached saw, made by Fox Grinders Co. of Pennsylvania, were defective.

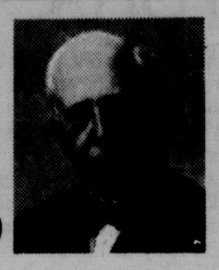

Lueders was injured when a blade on the saw shattered and a piece of metal struck him in the back, lacerating his liver, the suit said.

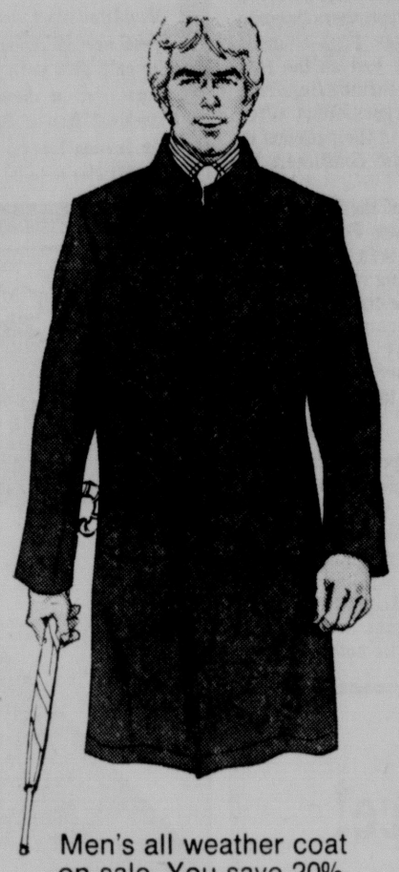

A jury trial in Lincoln was requested.

New Orleans dockworkers' strike ends with union order

New Orleans (UPI) — Dockworkers at the nation's second largest port abandoned their costly 16-day general strike Monday and returned to work under a union order.

Although some members of the International Longshoreman's Association said they would remain off the job and continue picketing, harbor police said no demonstrators were reported.

"The men returned to work very peaceably," Port Director Edward S. Reed said Monday.

Reed said only a limited number of ships were at the port because some vessels had been diverted to other ports that still loaded and unloaded general cargo.

"It's going to take a while to get those ships back," he said. "But now that the men are working general cargo and limiting the strike to containerized we're at least on the same footing with other ports."

The New Orleans economy lost an estimated $2 million each day the docks were idle and Associate Port Director Henry G. Joffray said the longshoremen and a three-week backlog of accumulated work.

"We still face irretrievable losses in grain, sugar and general cargo that was deferred to other ports," Joffray said. "We lost close to 150,000 tons of cargo."

A labor hall spokesman said more than 100 men reported for work — more than needed to fill available jobs.

"The men were there, but they didn't have enough ships," said Wilfred Daliet, president of ILA Local 1419.

An estimated 2,000 to 3,000 grain barges were anchored along the Mississippi River, waiting for the strike to end. The backlog of barges could mean further delays in cargo movement.

Dailet Saturday ordered his men to begin unloading all but containerized ships — the same strike imposed at 29 other Gulf and Atlantic ports. He said a vote taken by the local ILA members for a general strike was not sanctioned by the national union.

The ILA also faced the threat of federal intervention and mounting pressure from farmers and grain officials. New Orleans handles almost half the grain exports from the U.S.

Lincoln Scottish Rite Masons elevated to thirty-third degree

Four Lincoln men were elected to the thirty-third degree of the Scottish Rite Masons.

They are: Hon. Warren K. Urbom, U.S. district judge; Leo Hill, industrialist; Donald R. Swanson, secretary of Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph; Warren D. Lichty, Jr., assistant attorney general of Nebraska.

Lincolnites designated Knights Commander of the Court of Honor are: Jim L. Brown, Dan W. Olmstedt, George A. Preece, David W. Stempson, John D. VerMaas, and Gladwyn A. Youngs.

N.Y. worshipers crowd memorial mass for Crosby

New York (AP) — Three thousand worshipers filled St. Patrick's Cathedral for a Mass in Bing Crosby's memory Monday, while a crucifix-topped coffin bearing the singer's body was being flown home for burial.

Terence Cardinal Cooke described Crosby, who died Friday of a heart attack following a golf match in Madrid, Spain, as "a man . . . of warm presence and outstanding talents . . . a man loved by millions." The service in New York was one of several Masses that have been held on two continents since the death of the world-famous entertainer, a Roman Catholic.

A commercial flight bearing Crosby's dark brown coffin, accompanied by his 19-year-old son Harry, arrived at New York's Kennedy Airport shortly before 4 p.m. CDT. The coffin was transferred to a plane headed for Los Angeles.

Private services and burial are scheduled for Tuesday in St. Paul's Catholic Church in Westwood, a Los Angeles suburb.

Moscow's hit parade shows rock popularity

Moscow (AP) — In a new concession to the growing Russian ranks of pop music fans, a Soviet newspaper has begun publishing a hit parade of the "top 10" Soviet and foreign tunes.

The feature, called "Musical Parade," includes lists of Soviet and foreign songs most popular in the Soviet Union. The monthly lists began appearing Saturday in Moskovsky Komsomolets, the newspaper of the Moscow Young Communist League.

The first chart lists the top foreign song as "Indian Summer" by French singer Joe Dassin. Others are "Souvenirs" by Greek singer Demis Russos; "Money, Money, Money" and "S.O.S." by the Swedish group Abba; "I Am Alone" by the Dutch group Teach-In; various renditions of the Spanish song "El Bimbo"; British singer Elton John's "Goodbye, Yellow Brick Road"; "July Morning" by the British group Uriah Heep; "Sunny" by the British group Boni M.; and "Ciao Bambino Sorry" by French songstress Mireille Mathieu.

But since few foreign rock records are available in record stores here, Soviet fans may not be able to get their hands on some of the top 10 recordings.

Osborne disturbed with lack of 'effort'

By Virgil Parker
Sports Editor

University of Nebraska chancellor Roy Young and athletic director Bob Devaney were at the head table for the Extra Point Club luncheon Monday noon. It appeared to be a fine "vote of confidence" showing for Cornhusker coach Tom Osborne after his club was upset by Iowa State.

Osborne wasn't sure that was the reason. "Chancellor Young wanted to listen to someone who has more problems than he has," Osborne joked. "He wants to see how I can get out of this one. To be honest, I don't know how I will."

The Husker grid boss admitted he didn't feel much like joking. "I haven't slept very well the past couple of nights. It's hard to get out of bed in the morning to face the task at hand after a loss like that."

Osborne pointed to four things — turnovers, field position, ball control and team effort — as the main factors which led to Nebraska's second-straight defeat at the hands of an underdog Cyclone squad.

The effort displayed by his team — or lack of effort — was the most disturbing, Osborne said.

"Before the game, I felt our players were ready," Osborne observed. "They remembered last year. Yet the films show that Iowa State really gave a greater effort. That hasn't been the case in any other game this year."

Osborne said that in the loss to Washington State in the season opener, his team gave its best.

"Washington State played an errorless game. That was the difference," he felt. "But this time I just don't feel we played as hard as Iowa State. And that comes back to haunt you."

Iowa State also played without a mistake. "Oh, the statistics show they had one fumble," Osborne noted, "but it was meaningless. It came on fourth down, late in the game and deep in our territory.

"On the other hand," he added, "we had two fumbles. Usually, that's not too much to overcome. But both of our fumbles were deep at our end of the field. Iowa State converted those two errors into 10 points, which was more than enough to decide the outcome of the game."

Field position also was important. "The best we ever started out was on our own 41 yard line," Osborne noted. "Usually it was down around our own 20. That's because they took good care of the ball and had a good kicking game."

Osborne said the Huskers pride themselves in a ball-control offense. "We usually expect to run about 20 plays a game more than our opponent. Two years ago we averaged 83 plays a game to our opponent's 63. Last year it was 76-53. But in this game Iowa State had 87 plays to our 60. There were long periods of time when our offense was on the sidelines, and it's hard to win with that situation."

Osborne called Colorado, this week's foe in Memorial Stadium, "likely the best overall team in the Big Eight. Iowa State probably had the best defense — because of their big linemen — but for offensive and defensive balance, Colorado will be tougher.

"Coloardo has a more stable quarterback in Jeff Knapple than they've had in a long time," Osborne added. "He has speed as a runner and is a good passer. They also have a better running fullback (James Mayberry) than I can ever remember."

Nebraska assistant coach Jerry Moore, who has been studying the films of Colorado's past games, says the Buffs defense is "big, strong and quick. They have good skilled people. Position by position, they're as good as anybody in the Big Eight."

A spokesman for the Nebraska ticket office said the Colorado game "is an absolute sellout. There isn't a ticket to be had anywhere. Tickets weren't that tough to get for the first four games," he admitted. "Last week (for Iowa State), they were very scarce. But, for Colorado, the ticket situation is impossible."

Huskers 17th, 18th in college grid polls

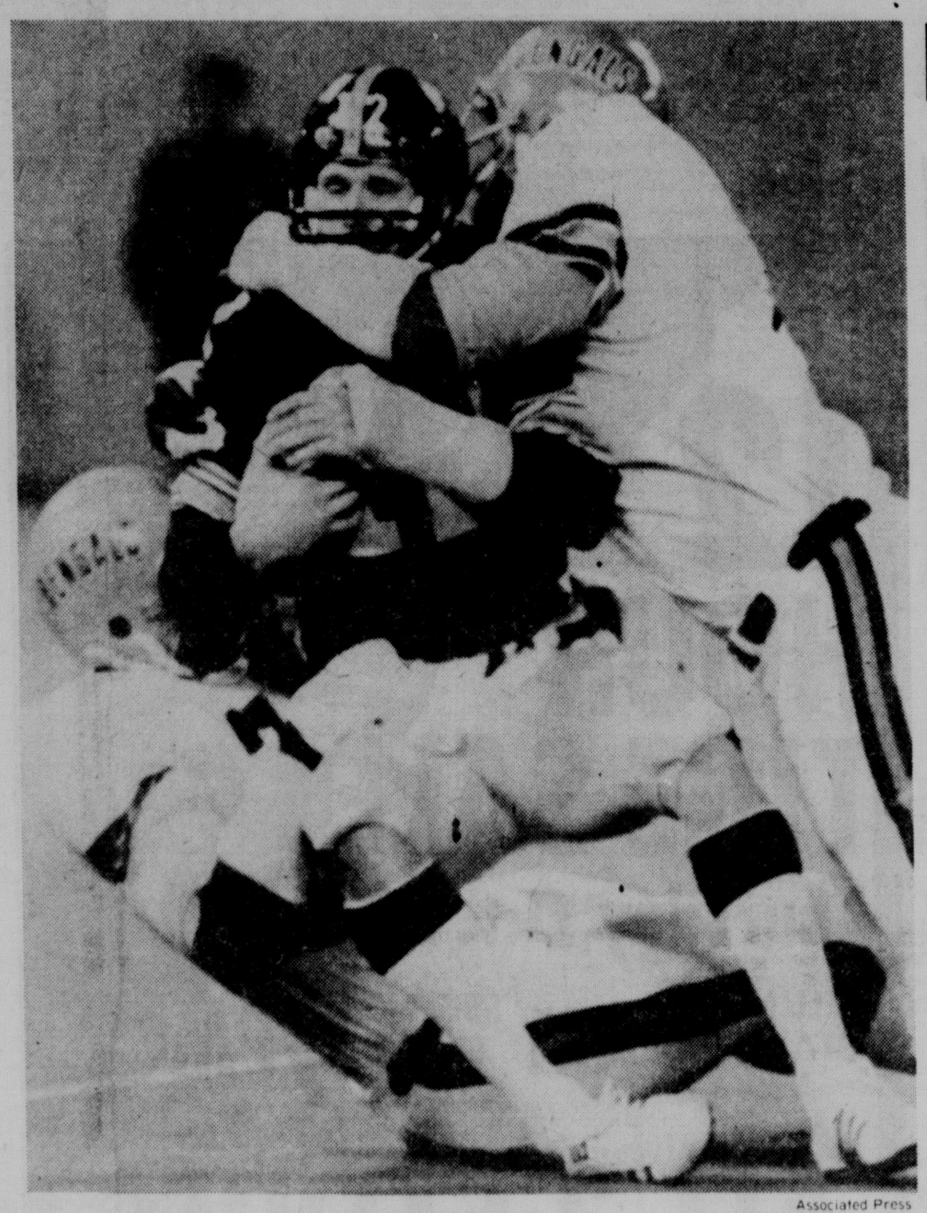

From Press Reports

The Nebraska Cornhuskers, ninth a week ago in both polls, dropped to 17th and 18th in the United Press International and Associated Press weekly college grid polls, respectively, on the heels of a 24-21 loss to Iowa State Saturday.

Michigan and Texas remain No. 1 and No. 2, respectively, in the wire services' top 20 ratings after the sixth week of football.

Top-rated Michigan solidified its No. 1 spot with a 56-0 whipping of Wisconsin — which had been ranked 14th and 15th in the polls. Texas pulled out a 13-9 win over eighth-rated Arkansas.

Latest Yankee explosion passes

New York (UPI) — New York Yankee pitcher Ed Figueroa, who was all set to fly home to Puerto Rico after manager Billy Martin decided to pitch Mike Torrez instead of him in the sixth game of the World Series, had a sudden change of heart Monday and said he'll be at Yankee Stadium for Tuesday night's contest with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Martin had announced to the news media after Sunday's 10-4 loss to the Dodgers that Figueroa would pitch the sixth game. But the Yankees' skipper changed his mind after conferring with trainer Gene Monahan and named Torrez as his starter.

Figueroa then asked Martin if he could leave the club, Martin granted permission and the pitcher made plans to return to Puerto Rico.

"I asked Billy if I could go home and he said go ahead," Figueroa said when reached at his Fort Lee, N.J. apartment. "Then I thought about it and decided it would be a bad move on my part. It wouldn't look good and even though I dont' want to play for the Yanks next year, I want to be part of the club until the Series is over."

Figueroa was at Yankee Stadium Monday but denied that any Yankee officials were responsible for his change in plans.

"Nobody called me because there was nothing to it," he said. "Billy had given me permission to leave and I was going until I decided it would be a wrong move."

What was the reason for the change? It seems Figueroa is not completely recovered from the nerve damage on his right index finger which has kept him out of the Series so far. Figueroa, distraught over the latest developments, refused to talk to reporters after Sunday's game.

"Figueroa isn't 100 per cent and if a pitcher isn't 100 per cent I don't want him out there," said Martin.

So, it will be the right-handed Torrez against right-hander Burt Hooton Tuesday night and the game could develop into a real pitcher's duel if both men flash the form they demonstrated in their earlier Series outings.

Torrez was the winning pitcher in the third game last Friday night when he went the distance on a seven-hitter and struck out nine. Hooton won the second game when he stopped the Yankees on five hits.

With the Yankees needing only one more victory to win the World Series, Torrez wasn't expecting to start again unless it came down to a decisive seventh game Wednesday night. But, he is happier to be starting the sixth game since he feels he works better on only three days rest.

"I'm just happy to be going out there," said Torrez. "It'll be a super feeling to know that I have a chance to win the Series. I'll do the best Mike Torrez can do. If I get three or four runs, I'll be all right."

Scoring that many runs against Hooton is a tough order, though, if his famed knuckle-curveball is working and he has his control.

"I feel great and I'm speculating a win," said Hooton. "Getting the first two guys in their lineup out is the key—getting (Mickey) Rivers and (Willie) Randolph out shuts off a big part of their offense. It's a lot easier to pitch to the big guys when there's no one on base.

"It's the biggest game of my career, but then again, so were my last two starts. I'm relaxed. I don't even think about the pressure until someone else brings it up. Yankee Stadium is a good park for me to pitch in. The mound is good and the crowd really wasn't a factor.

"Everything was working well for me the last time—my fastball, knuckle-curve and change. I'll need them all again Tuesday. I don't know, I could give up five or six runs and it may be good enough to win. Or, maybe I'll pitch as well as I did last time and we'll lose, 1-0."

Keeping speed off bases key to winning for Hooton

New York (AP) — The last time Burt Hooton faced the New York Yankees, he beat them with a solid game plan and a slippery knuckle-curve ball — and he says the American League champions will get more of both Tuesday night in the sixth game of the World Series.

"I'm going to try to keep Mickey Rivers and Willie Randolph off the bases," said the Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Monday on the eve of his must-win assignment. "I think we'll be in good shape if I can do that."

Rivers and Randolph are the 1-2 batters in the New York lineup and usually set the table for a Murderer's Row of left-handed hitters.

Hooton's ability to keep Rivers and Randolph in check was one of the reasons the blond right-hander was able to whip the Yankees 6-1 with a five-hitter in the second game of the championship at Yankee Stadium last Wednesday night. Another reason was the wicked knuckle-curve, Hooton's No. 1 pitch.

"The Yankees looked as if they had never seen the thing before," said Bill Russell, the Los Angeles shortstop who along with Hooton and Manager Tom Lasorda featured an off-day news conference Monday.

Hooton hopes that still will be the case Tuesday night, since the Dodgers trail 3-2 in the best-of-seven Series and have to win to stay alive in the cross-country matchup.

"I don't enjoy pitching in cold weather," said Hooton, referring to a forecast that predicted cool and clear weather with temperatures in the 40s. "But I can't worry about that. I have to just go out and pitch the best way I know how. The weather will be just as much a disadvantage for the hitters. I don't think many of them like hitting in weather like that, anyway."

Hooton, as a matter of fact, may have an advantage in the cold-weather situation because of his style. He enjoys mixing inside fastballs with his knuckler.

"That can sting the hands," he said.

Bengals falter in loss, Steelers gain 20-14 win

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Rocky Bleier ran for two touchdowns and rookie Sidney Thornton ran for another Monday night to lead the Pittsburgh Steelers to their sixth straight victory, 20-14, over the Cincinnati Bengals in a nationally televised game between the AFC Central Division rivals.

The victory gave the Steelers a 3-2 record, moving them into a three-way tie for first place in the four-team division with Cleveland and Houston. Cincinnati, which has never won in Three Rivers Stadium in eight tries, fell to 2-3.

Bleier scored on plunges of one and two yards following Cincinnati turnovers. Thornton also scored on a 1-yard plunge, one play after Terry Bradshaw, playing with a half-cast on his broken left wrist, completed a 40-yard pass to Bennie Cunningham to put the Steelers on the Cincinnati one. Roy Gerela kicked two extra points but missed another and was short and wide left on a 43-yard field goal attempt.

The Bengals scored their first touchdown just before halftime on a 4-yard run by offensive lineman Glenn Bujnoch after a lateral from backup quarterback John Reaves, who entered the game after Ken Anderson was sidelined for the night with a knee injury.

Cincinnati scored again with 1:26 left in the game when linebacker Ray Phillips blocked a Bobby Walden punt and Reggie Williams fell on the ball in the end zone.

After the Bengals' second touchdown, they recovered an onsides kick and drove deep into Steelers' territory. Isaac Curtis dropped a pass in the end zone with 11 seconds remaining and then caught another pass and carried it to the eight but time ran out.

Both teams were hampered by injuries to key offensive players, causing a sloppily played game. Altogether the Steelers lost three fumbles plus the blocked punt, while the Bengals turned the ball over five times via a fumble and interceptions of one Anderson pass and three Reaves passes. There were also numerous penalties called on both teams.

Thornton's TD run in the fourth quarter capped a 59-yard, 9-play drive.

Veteran umpire dies

St. Petersburg, Fla. (UPI) — Cal Hubbard, veteran major league umpire and the only man ever elected to both the professional football and baseball Halls of Fame, died Monday night.

The 76-year-old Hubbard's son, Dr. Robert Hubbard of suburban Gulfport, reported his father died of cancer after a short illness.

Hubbard, a 6-foot-5, 250-pound tackle in an era when most lines averaged 200 pounds, played 10 years for the New York Giants, Green Bay Packers and Pittsburgh Steelers. He was elected in 1963 as a charter member of the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Hubbard, who began umpiring pickup baseball games at age 18, became a professional umpire in the spring of 1920 with the Piedmont league following his first season in pro football with the Giants. For 10 years, he played pro football and umpired baseball.

Hubbard joined the American League umpire corps in 1936. He worked four World Series, in 1938, 1942, 1946 and 1949.

In 1951 he was involved in a hunting accident in which a gun pellet lodged in his right eye. That ended his career on the diamond. The American League kept him on as an assistant superviser of umpires and in 1954 he was named umpire superviser for the league.

He retired to Milan, Mo., in 1969 and, on doctor's orders, moved to Treasure Island, near St. Petersburg, in January, 1976. That year he was elected to the Baseball Hall of fame, only the fifth umpire chosen for that honor.

Friday was busy for Milford

By Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

Last Friday, Bruce Stutzman was more nervous than a teenager on his first date.

But after a 7 lb., 1 oz. baby girl and a 29-0 win over Tri County, the Milford football coach was breathing easier.

"We've been talking all year about what if the baby was born on a Friday," Stutzman said. "You might know it would happen that way."

Last Friday, Stutzman was in his usual seat in a downtown Milford cafe for a coaches' breakfast at 7 a.m. Fifteen minutes later, he got a phone call.

Wife Karen was ready for the trip to Lincoln's St. Elizabeth Community Health Center.

"Bruce was a nervous wreck," she said. "our last baby came so fast we almost didn't get to the hospital. I was completely calm, but he started running around and getting in my way.

"Babies can't be born on a Friday," Karen added. "It blew our minds at the time, but it couldn't have worked out more perfectly."

Amber Nicole was delivered one minute after noon. Bruce got back to Milford at 4:45 p.m. and the bus was on its way to DeWitt at 5:15.

"I was sure glad it was an away game," Bruce said. "I needed some time to collect my thoughts. I was already worried about the game. Our top two running backs and tight end were hurt and couldn't play."

Halfback Dennis Boesen broke a hand, tight end Jeff Shaw bruised a kidney and halfback Don Danekas sprained an ankle the previous week in sixth-ranked Milford's 29-0 win over Wilber.

Enter Jon Eicher, a 6-1, 175-pound senior. He switched from fullback to halfback and ran like he thought he was O. J. Simpson.

Eicher rushed for 217 yards on 24 carries against Tri County. He had touchdown runs of 3 and 51 yards and also snagged a 61-yard scoring pass.

The 1976 all-Southern Nebraska Conference back, thus, responded to pressure better than his coach that day.

"I really was nervous," Stutzman admitted. "I can get ready for a football game and keep things together. But I'm afraid I wasn't much help to Karen before we left. I just got in her way.

"I was more help at the hospital," he pointed out. "I did wonder once though if it was going to be a long, drawn out process. I'm glad it wasn't."

Stutzman won't have to worry this Friday night. His high-flying Eagles are idle. Some of his staff will scout Wymore Southern, next week's opponent.

Other attention will focus on a possible opponent in the state playoffs.

"We'd like to see Superior or Henderson knock off Hebron in our district," Stutzman said. "Otherwise, we're hoping to get one of the wild cards.

"It would probably be the second wild card, if it happens, meaning we'd probably draw Centennial in the playoffs."

Donnell, Pillen given top posts

Preparing his squad to rebound from Saturday's upset at the hands of Iowa State, Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne sent the Cornhuskers through a two-hour practice Monday at Memorial Stadium.

The Huskers, who are 4-2 overall after the 24-21 loss to the Cyclones, entertain undefeated (5-0-1) Colorado this Saturday at Memorial Stadium in a 1:30 p.m. homecoming contest.

There will be two changes in the Husker starting lineup against the Buffs. When the new depth chart was released Monday afternoon, monsterback Jim Pillen and fullback Dodie Donnell had advanced to starting roles.

Pillen, a junior from Monroe who had started the first five games this season, gave way to Kent Smith against Iowa State. Donnell, a starter last year, moves ahead of Monte Anthony. A senior from Hackensack, N.J., Donnell has been bothered this season by a neck injury.

Tom Davis (hip pointer), James Wightman (knee), Ted Harvey (leg cramp), Jeff Carpenter (elbow), Bill Barnett (broken leg) and Larry Valasek (back) were all slowed by injuries during the workout.

The top units according to the latest depth chart included:

Offense

Defense

Prep Ratings

By Randy York

Class C-1

1—Hebron (7-0)	6—Wahoo Neumann (6-1)
2—Tekamah-Herman (7-0)	7—Gibbon (7-0)
3—Centennial (7-0)	8—Bayard (7-0)
4—Oakland-Craig (6-1)	9—Elkhorn MM (7-0)
5—Milford (6-1)	10—Norfolk Catholic (7-0)

Comment — Disparity exists in top 10, considering Oakland-Craig crushed Dodge, 53-6, last week while unbeaten Norfolk Catholic edged the same club, 7-6, three weeks ago. Fullerton, Plainview and Pender, all 6-1, are ratings timber. Hebron plays at Class B Superior Friday.

Class C-2

1—Neb. City Lourdes (7-0)	6—Grant (6-1)
2—Ansley (7-0)	7—Rep. Valley (6-1)
3—Henderson (7-0)	8—Hershey (5-1-1)
4—Anselmo-Merna (5-1)	9—Dorchester (6-1)
5—Humphrey SF (6-1)	10—Hemingford (6-1)

Comment — If C-1's top-ranked Hebron survives Superior and C-2's third-ranked Henderson dispatches five-game winner Clay Center this weekend, a Southern Nebraska Conference showdown is in the works the following Wednesday at Hebron.

Class D

1—St. Edward (7-0)	6—Med. Valley (4-2-1)
2—Nelson (7-0)	7—Coleridge (6-1)
3—Axtell (7-0)	8—Bancroft (6-0)
4—Greeley (6-0)	9—Cedar Bluffs (6-1)
5—Loomis (6-0-1)	10—Pleasanton (5-2)

Comment — Loomis loses no ground despite 7-7 tie with five-game winner Kearney Catholic. District 5 representative in the state playoffs likely will be determined Friday night when Loomis plays at No. 3 Axtell.

Eight-Man

1—Hampton (7-0)	6—Eustis (6-0)
2—Adams (7-0)	7—Shickley (6-1)
3—Wheatland (7-0)	8—Beemer (7-0)
4—Potter (7-0)	9—Wheeler Central (5-1)
5—Trumbull (7-0)	10—Wilsonville (7-0)

Comment — Hordville and Brady were dropped. Wheeler Central and Wilsonville are new. Dawson-Verdon and Decatur were also given strong consideration. Trumbull scored last weekend's biggest win, 40-36 over Shickley.

Football

With starting quarterback Gifford Nielsen out for the season with a knee injury, Marc Wilson moved up from the second team and made his presence known immediately by setting a Western Athletic Conference record with seven touchdown passes Saturday in leading the Cougars to a 63-17 rout of Colorado State.

The 6-foot-5, 206-pounder from Seattle, who completed 15 of 25 passes for 332 yards, was named Monday to UPI's Backfield of the Week. Joining Wilson in the backfield are California's Oliver Hillmon, Amos Lawrence of North Carolina and Elliott Walker of Pittsburgh.

Baseball

The Chicago Cubs announced Monday the signing of three new coaches for the 1978 season — Cookie Rojas, Joey Amalfitano and Mike Roarke.

The wife and daughter of Andre Thornton, first baseman for the Cleveland Indians, were killed and Thornton and his son were injured early Monday in a one-car accident on the Pennsylvania Turnpike near Somerset, Pa.

Basketball

The Portland Trail Blazers placed veteran guard Herm Gilliam on waivers Monday in order to get their roster down to the 12-player limit.

Scott May, who missed the start of last season with mononucleosis, might also miss the Chicago Bulls' season opener at Cleveland Tuesday night. May has a strained left knee.

The Seattle SuperSonics signed free agent guard Gus Williams to a three-year contract Monday.

Other sports

Philadelphia Daily News sports columnist Stan Hochman Monday accused ABC-TV sports commentator Howard Cosell of assaulting him aboard an airplane preparing to leave Los Angeles following Sunday's World Series game. Hochman charged Cosell with slapping him Sunday night after the two exchanged sarcastic remarks.

Old names on new clubs highlight NBA openers

On the eve of the new National Basketball Association season, you really "can't tell the teams without a scorecard."

When the NBA's 32nd season begins Tuesday night, some of the top-rated guards and forwards in the game will be appearing in new uniforms as a result of a flurry of trades and the movement of free agents.

Walt Frazier and Nate Archibald, two of the NBA's finest guards of the 70's were shipped to Cleveland and Buffalo, respectively, from the New York Knicks and New Jersey Nets. Frazier, who set the tempo for the Knick championship teams of 1970 and 1973, went to the Cavaliers as compensation for signing free-agent guard Jim Cleamons.

Archibald, the quick penetrating guard who led the league in both scoring and assists in 1972-73, injured an achilles tendon in the preseason and may miss the entire season.

The Indiana Pacers swapped guard-forward Billy Knight — the NBA's second-leading scorer last year — to Buffalo in exchange for Rookie of the Year forward Adrian Dantley and sent the league's assist and steal leader, Don Buse, to the Phoenix Suns for guard Rickey Sobers.

Guard Brian Taylor went from Kansas City to Denver, Buffalo's Ernie DiGregorio and Atlanta's Lou Hudson were sent to the Los Angeles Lakers — who probably will lead the league in roster changes despite compiling the best record in the NBA last season.

Three quality forwards became free agents over the summer and have signed with new teams; Jamaal Wilkes left Golden State to play for Los Angeles; Leonard (Truck) Robinson went from Atlanta to New Orleans and Bob Dandridge left Milwaukee to sign with Washington.

All this movement may not alter the balance of power in the league, however, as most of last season's playoff teams figure to qualify again in 1977-78.

In the Atlantic Division, talent-laden Philadelphia looms as the team to beat ... if they don't beat themselves first with dissension. Last season, the 76ers lost to Portland in the playoff finals after a regular season spiced with flare-ups anf discontent. All the discord in the world, however, cannot undermine the wondrous talents of forwards Julius "Dr. J" Erving and eorge McGinnis and guard Doug Collins.

The Boston Celtics may reestablish themselves as a playoff threat if center Dave Cowens can recapture the endless enthusiasm which characterized his frenzied play. Rookie forward Cedric Maxwell will have to learn the NBA ropes quickly as Boston's frontcourt is thin. Jo Jo White and Charlie Scott form a potent backcourt pair and Dave Bing's savvy may help.

The New York Knicks remain a question mark as they sort among a plethora of big men — Bob McAdoo, Lonnie Shelton, Spencer Haywood, Tom McMillen — for the right combination under new coach Willis Reed.

The Houston Rockets and Washington Bullets figure to battle for the top spot in the Central Division once again.

Center Moses Malone may be ready to fully blossom as an All-Star, after displaying flashes of brilliance last season, and Houston's triad of guards — Mike Newlin, Calvin Murphy and John Lucas — are among the league's finest. Wasington will team the newly acquired Dandridge with Elvin Hayes in what may become a devastating forward combination. Young center Mitch Kupchak came on strong last season and may supplant Wes Unseld before long.

Frazier should fit in with Cleveland's pattern offense, but the Cavaliers lack firepower and San Antonio lacks defense.

In the Midwest, the Chicago Bulls roared down the stretch last year and lost a tough three-game playoff to Portland. Forward scott May is healthy and he combines with Mickey Johnson, Norm Van Lier and Artis Gilmore in a strong starting lineup.

The Denver Nuggets won 49 games last season, but faded quickly in the playoffs. Brian Taylor is a quality addition to the backcourt, but David Thompson, Bobby Jones and Dan Issel need added depth to carry Denver farther along.

Marvin Barnes puts in time with the Detroit Pistons this year instead of a jail cell, and he will combine with perennial All-Star center Bob Lanier to form a powerful rebounding combination.

Portland and Los Angeles may wage a fierce war for first vlace in the Pacifice Division.

The defending champion Trail Blazers return with a beautifully balanced offense with scoring spread among starters Bill Walton, Maurice Lucas. Bob Gross, Lionel Hollins and Johnny Davis. Walton is the key with his passing from the post and his extraordinary defense which allows his teammates to gamble.

The Lakers are so loaded that they cut former All-Star Cazzie Russell. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar returns to dominate NBA centers and the five-time MVP will be complemented by new additions in guards DiGregorio and Hudson and forward Jamaal Wilkes. Seattle will have a new coach, Bob Hopkins, who replaces his cousin — Bill Russell.

In Tuesday's openers, Kansas City plays at the New York Knicks, Chicago is at Cleveland, New Jersey at Detroit, Los Angeles at Milwaukee and Golden State at Phoenix.

Fair board files protest

United Press International

The Executive Board of the Nebraska State Fair has voted unanimously to protest the recent decision to split the Fair's 1978 racing season in Lincoln.

The State Racing Commission last week recommended that the Lincoln racing season stop in mid-session for the State Fair and then restart after the fair has concluded.

The Fair Board said Monday it will request a meeting with the commission before the end of the month.

"Our primary obligation to the people of Nebraska is to conduct the State Fair," Henry Brandt, fair manager, said. "Scheduling races before and after the fair would seriously affect its quality.

"We are most anxious to lengthen our race meet in 1978, but the commission's proposal would cripple both our racing program and the fair."

Brandt said the split season is "unfair to race fans who have supported the state's program so enthusiastically."

The 1977 season broke a North American record for mutuel handle, or betting, increases.

"I've already received negative reaction and surprise from a number of people. It appears to be an unpopular decision (to split the racing season.)," he said.

Boroff pleased with Kearney results

By Ken Hambleton
State College Writer

Kearney State football coach Claire Boroff admits he never had as much fun as he's having this season.

"Each week we can look back on the practices and say that everybody has improved that week," said Boroff, "and that's what coaching is all about.

"We've been improving every week and I can say that almost everyone on this team has improved every practice," said Boroff.

Kearney won its fourth straight game with a come-from-behind 28-21 victory over Washburn Saturday giving the Antelopes sole possession of the lead in the Central States Conference football race.

"In our last four games we've turned the ball over once a game, with one exception and we've averaged more than 260 yards rushing and 360 total yards in those four games," said Boroff. "It's sure a lot different than we were after starting with a tie and a loss.

"Three-year starting linemen Mike Golden, and Bill Windhorst along with Crete native Greg Rocke and Steve Leach are giving our offense the time to operate," said Boroff. "Running backs Gregg Baker, 80 yards per game average, Dean Edelman, Jeff Bolin, and quarterback Kevin Roach give us all kinds of flexibility.

"Of course our defense is strong (second best in the state) and that makes a lot of difference between winning and losing," Boroff said.

Kearney's 3-0 mark in the CSIC will be threatened this Saturday by Emporia State of Kansas.

Emporia State, winless in 19 straight games until beating Doane earlier this season, topped preseason conference favorites Missouri Southern and Fort Hays.

"With Wayne topping No. Southern and Missouri Western this past week, the two Nebraska teams are doing pretty well in the conference," said Boroff.

Wayne topped previously unbeaten and 16th ranked (NAIA Div. I) Mo. Western 21-15 Saturday. The Wildcats topped 16th ranked (NAIA Div. II) Midland and 17th rated Mo. Southern earlier in the season.

Dana College football coach Gary Seevers has his team off on a record pace again this season as the Vikings hold a 3-2 overall record and a 1-1 Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference mark.

Last year's 3-5 season was the best in 10 years for Dana, but this year Seevers is hoping the Vikings have found the secret to success.

"Balance, that comes from consistency and execution is the key to our winning games and I think we finally found it last week againt Concordia," said Seevers, now in his fourth year at the Blair college.

"Two weeks ago we lost to Hastings (16-14) because we didn't have any balance on offense at all," said Seevers, Dana's junior quarterback Doug Meggison, who snapped all the school passing records his freshman year, threw for 369 yards, but the Vikings could muster just 88 yards rushing.

In Saturday's win over Concordia, though, the Vikings rolled up 200 yards rushing and 88 passing. "That's the kind of balance we are looking for," Seevers said.

Meggison, who is second in the state in passing with a 163.5 yards per game average, "is finally getting some help from our backs Todd Roecker and Bill Rock," Seevers said.

Dana's consistent defense is third in total defense in the state, allowing just 162 yards per game, and first in passing defense allowing 68 yards per game in the air.

"We have a lot of experience with Jay Paist and Tony Jacobs at linebackers," said Seevers. "They give us a lot of leadership and we have four other seniors back on defense this year."

Dana hosts Nebraska Wesleyan Saturday at 2 p.m.

ChiSox' Lemon honored

New York (UPI) — Bob Lemon's first thought when he learned he had been elected the American League's manager of the year was to say "thanks" and his second was to praise Earl Weaver.

The Chicago White Sox manager was chosen for the honor by an 11-7 vote over the Baltimore Orioles' pilot in the UPI's annual post - season survey. The White Sox finished third in the Western Division while the Orioles tied the Boston Red Sox for second place in the Eastern Division.

"It's a great honor to win this year especially in view of the job Weaver did in Baltimore," said Lemon. "He did a really fine job.

"The Orioles looked like they didn't have a chance to be contenders in spring training," Lemon pointed out. "But Earl used a combination of young players and veterans to stay in the race right down to the end."

The White Sox bowed out of contention in September and wound up 12 games behind the first-place Kansas City Royals in the Western Division but were contenders for 4½ months and in first place as late as Aug. 14. The season was both an artistic and financial success for the White Sox, who had finished sixth and drawn a home attendance of only 914,945 in 1976 under Manager Paul Richards.

Despite their late - season slump, the White Sox wound up the season with a 90-72 record and their home attendance increased 741,190 to 1,656,135.

Lemon, whose patience with young players is one of his outstanding attributes, managed the Royals to one second and two fourth-place finishes from 1970 through 1972. He managed Sacramento in the Pacific Coast League in 1974 and Richmond in the International League in 1975 before joining the New York Yankees as a coach in 1976.

Lemon, who was inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame in 1976, pitched for the Cleveland Indians from 1946 through 1958 and compiled a 207-128 won-lost record. He had seven 20-victory seasons, pitched a no-hitter, had a 2-2 mark in World Series competition and pitched in four All-Star games.

Billy Martin of the Yankees finished third in the balloting with three votes, Gene Mauch of the Minnesota Twins had two and Whitey Herzog of the Royals and Don Zimmer of the Red Sox one each.

Dodgers' Yeager talks himself into being 'tough guy'

By John Schulian
(c) Chicago Daily News

Los Angeles — He was one of the first Dodgers at the ball park. He is always one of the first Dodgers at the ballpark. Those who have studied Steve Yeager say he uses his daily headstart to talk himself into being a tough guy.

It was good he showed up early yesterday. As soon as he shifted from a walk to a trot, his right knee was on fire. "It's nothing," he said. He was lying.

Yeager has been a catcher for half of his 28 years, and he is fully aware that if the foul tips, flying bats and homeplate collisions don't get him, the constant squatting will. All he asks is that the ineviatable happen at a convenient time.

Sunday definitely wasn't convenient. The fifth game of the World Series was about to be played, and the Dodgers were struggling to avoid extinction. The team trainer who spotted Yeager limping in batting practice didn't even bother to ask if he would be able to play.

Yeager is a tough guy, remember? Besides, the sight of Don Gullett, the Yankees' starting pitcher, never fails to make him feel better than he has any right to.

"There's just some guys you can murder whether they're throwing the ball 100 miles an hour or just lobbing it up there," said Yeager, a .250 hitter who would seem to have no business feeding off the artful Gullett. "I don't know why it could be that way with Donnie. Hell, I hate most left-handers. Their breaking pitches always get in on my hands and tie me up. But Donnie can't do that to me. I know I can hit him. If you think you can hit God, you can hit Him, too."

Yeager got religion three years ago when Gullett, then doing time in Cincinnati, served him a game-winning grand slam. The memory of it made Yeager forget about popping up his first at-bat Sunday and start drooling over what he was going to do to the next serving of the Red's off-speed slop.

He had to wait only three pitches in the fourth inning before he saw it again. Afterwards he couldn't recall exactly what the ball Gullett threw was doing — sinking, sliding, fluttering — but he knew what he did to the ball. He pumped it into the nether reaches of the left-field bleachers with two teammates on base and put the Dodgers half way to the 10-4 score by which they would eventually humble the Yankees.

"I'm sure I loosened our guys up," Yeager said. "They figured that if a weak hitter like me can have fun against Gullett, they better have a few laughs themselves."

The fun stopped for Yeager after the sixth. "The Doc," he said, jerking a thumb toward Frank Jobe, the Dodgers' team physician. "He wanted to take a look at my knee." What he found were strained ligaments. Yeager was not impressed. You wouldn't be either if you had gone through what he has.

It has gotten to the point where discussions of his greatest hits have nothing to do with the way he swings his bat. Instead, they are about the hits that have been inflicted on him.

The ones everybody seems to get the loudest laughs from are the foul balls that make him walk bowlegged and threaten to turn him into a soprano. He got hit with just such a shot in full view of a Yankee stadium mob and national TV cameras in the second game of the series, but he claimed later that by his personal seismograph he has received harder jolts. "I took a foul tip in Pittsburgh," he said, "that made this one feel like a miss."

Dave Parker, the Pirates' gargantuan batting champion, treated Yeager to a different kind of pain. "I was trying to block home plate on a throw from the outfield," said Yeager, "and David ran right over me. I would have had a better chance against a truck on the Long Beach Freeway."

Even so, Yeager was back on his feet when Parker apologized after the game. He was not that lucky in the Dodgers' regular-season finale. Houston's Jose Cruz took a lusty swing, spun like a top and connected with the side of Yeager's head.

Yeager was carted to a hospital colder than a mackerel. "They X-rayed me," he said, setting up his favorite Dizzy Dean line, "and the X-rays showed nothing."

The amazing thing is, Yeager isn't safe even when he steps away from his position behind the plate. Three years ago, he was in the on-deck circle waiting for Bill Russell to finish hitting. As Russell hit the ball, Yeager looked away for a second. He looked back just in time to get hit in the throat with a hunk of Russell's shattered bat.

"I was a javelin catcher," Yeager says now.

Doctors removed nine large splinters from his throat. When he regained consciousness, they told him he had come within an eighth of an inch one way of being paralyzed for life and an eighth of an inch the other way of dying.

"How do you explain something like that to your wife?" asked Yeager. "When we got married a year and a half ago, I tried to tell her that life with a catcher wouldn't be normal. I told her I'd always have bumps and bruises, and that there'd be big people and little bitty people trying to step on my toes. But she still gets nervous and upset. She's probably out in the wives' waiting room worrying right now."

Yeager finished shaving and dabbed at a nick on his chin. He was pulling on his clothes when somebody came up and asked him to autograph a ball — and date it, too. "What the hell's the date?" Yeager growled.

Then he walked out of the clubhouse. Gloria Yeager, her dark blond hair pulled back in a ponytail, was waiting for him just where he thought she would be. She rushed up and wordlessly hugged him. "Hi, babe," Steve Yeager said. He was finished for the day as a tough guy.

OU's Switzer wary of Iowa State

Norman, Okla. (UPI) — Someone suggested Iowa State, the only team besides Oklahoma undefeated in conference play, might be pumped up by early success and playing above its talent. But Sooner coach Barry Switzer wouldn't buy that.

"They're not playing better than their talent," he said. "They're playing as good as their talent and that's why they're winning. They could play at Oklahoma.

"They're not taking a bunch of ragknots and telling 'em 'let's go win, guys,' " Switzer said at his weekly news luncheon.

Iowa State, he said, probably is the "most physical" defensive team in the Big Eight and has a sound offense sparked by tailback Dexter Green. "One of the most dangerous players in the league."

"He was stopped in the backfield for a three yard loss against Missouri, but he bounced back and made a 25-yard run to win the ball game," he said.

"They look awfully good," he said. "I hope they don't have the breaks Missouri had."

Missouri with Pete Woods at quarterback was a different team than the Tigers fielded the first five games, Switzer said. He said he knew the Sooners would see plenty of passes, and about half as many completions, but that would not mean the ball game.

"Against us they threw 42 times, and completed less than 50 per cent," he said. "A good passer will always complete 50 per cent but that doesn't necessarily mean points.

Rogers claims '600' tourney

Judie Rogers won the first '600' Club bowling tournament Sunday, shooting a handicap score of 727.

The meet was a 3-6-9 tourney, where the contestants were automatically given a strike in each of those three frames.

Rogers shot 683 scratch en route to her winning 727 total. Twilla Pohlman and Nyla Douglass tied for second with 718. The tourney was at Briarpark. According to 600 Club secretary-treasurer Patsy Schilke, the 63 contestants was the largest ever for a tourney held by the group which is for women who have bowled a 600 series.

Tourney leaders

1. Judie Rogers, 683-44 —727; 2. (tie Twilla Pohlman, 664-54—718 and Nyla Douglass, 662-56—718; 4. Dessa Heidtbrink, 637-65—702; 5. Pat Covert, 648-50—698; 6. Olive Hugelman, 641-54—695; 7. Sandy Firestone, 645-44—689; 8. Dot Stoner, 628-58—686; 9. (tie) Frances McIntosh, 634-48—682 and Fran Gilmore, 59290—682.

Grid rules interpretation

Each Tuesday the Lincoln Star brings its readers football officiating problems in which the official rules interpretation varies within the National Federation of State High School Associations, the NCAA and the NFL.

For instance:

A's ball 2nd down and 4 from B's 9 yard line. A's quarterback throws a pass into B's end zone. The ball is underthrown and B's cornerback is in position to intercept when A's left end comes over his back and knocks the ball to the ground.

What would you rule?

H.S. Federation: Offensive pass interference. A's ball 3rd down and 19 from B's 24 yard line. High school rules penalize offensive pass interference with a fifteen yard penalty from the previous line of scrimmage and loss of a down.

NCAA: Offensive pass interference — Touchback — B's ball 1st and 10 at their 20 yard line. NCAA penalty for offensive pass interference in the end zone is a touchback or 15 yards from the previous line of scrimmage and loss of down. In this situation, B would obviously take the touchback to prevent A another chance to score or make a first down.

NFL: Offensive pass interference. A's ball 2nd down and 14 from B's 19 yard line. NFL's penalty for offensive pass interference is a 10 yard penalty from the previous line of scrimmage.

Hunter safety clinic slated

The University of Nebraska Wildlife Club will sponsor a four-day hunter safety clinic next week in the Nebraska East Campus Union.

The Safety clinic will be held Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Thursday from 7-9 for all interested persons. Interested hunters should call 464-0641 and ask for Hunter Safety.

Vietnam holding three Americans

Washington (AP) — The Vietnamese government has confirmed it is holding three American civilians after their yacht was intercepted last week off the southern coast of Vietnam, the State Department said Monday night.

A State Department spokesman said it had received word through the Vietnamese Embassy in Paris that the two men and one woman were under detention after their vessel was towed to Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon.

"They said the three crew members are well and that the Vietnamese government is continuing its investigation," the spokesman said. He said the Vietnamese government claims the yacht was boarded Oct. 12 while it was in Vietnamese waters.

Sources in Bangkok said the 39-foot vessel, Brillig, was en route from Thailand to Brunei and Singapore when its crew issued a distress signal.

The last message said the yacht was being pursued by a boat which had opened fire and that they were "about to be rammed."

Aboard were Cornelia M. Dellenbaugh, a former Peace Corps worker and owner of the yacht; Leeland Dickerman of Flagstaff, Ariz., and Charles Affel of Philadelphia. Miss Dellenbaugh's hometown was not known, but her parents live in Vero Beach, Fla.

The State Department said it has asked the Vietnamese government for "prompt clarification of the circumstances of the apprehension and detention of the Brillig and her crew."

"We will press for the release of the Brillig and her crew," a statement said.

The Vietnamese previously had made no mention of the seizure. Vietnam's official news media, Vietnam News Agency and Voice of Vietnam, has been silent on the matter.

Nuclear engineer rejected 7-4

Washington (AP) — The Senate Environment and Public Works Committee Monday rejected the nomination of a nuclear engineer from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology to fill a seat on the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

By a 7 to 4 vote, the committee refused to approve Kent Hansen, 46, as President Carter's choice to join the five-member agency.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., chairman of a subcommittee on nuclear regulation, led opposition to the nomination of Hansen, who has been on the faculty at MIT since 1959.

Hart said Hansen lacked administrative experience to deal with the kind of national nuclear policy questions which come before the commission.

In addition, Hart said he was also worried "about possible appearance of conflict of interest" because of a number of consulting positions Hansen held with almost all elements of the nuclear industry in the United States.

The senator said because the NRC is an independent regulatory agency, nominees like Hansen should be given even closer scrutiny than political appointees selected by the President.

Hansen told the committee he expected to return to consulting for the nuclear power industry leaving the government.

"This movement of individuals back back and forth between regulatory agencies and the industries they regulate, the revolving door syndrome, has created a serious problem of public credibility. . ." Hart said.

Voting against the nomination besides Hart were Democratic Sens. Jennings Randolph of West Virginia, Mike Gravel of Alaska, Edmund Muskie of Maine, and Republicans John Chafee of Rhode Island and Robert Stafford of Vermont.

Castro defends intervention as 'obligation' to poor areas

Montego Bay, Jamaica (UPI) — Cuban President Fidel Castro Monday defended Cuba's intervention in Africa in a finger-wagging speech, telling a cheering crowd it was the Communist nation's "sacred obligation" to help poorer countries.

In a 70-minute speech at this north coast resort, Castro, dressed in his customary military fatigues, promised not to intervene in Jamaican affairs.

"We consider it our most sacred obligation to cooperate with countries less developed and poorer than we are," Castro told the flag-waving crowd that he personally estimated at 100,000 persons.

"That is what we call internationalism," he told Jamaicans jamming Sam Sharpe Square, which was named for the leader of a Jamaican slave rebellion.

Castro is in Jamaica for a five-day state visit, which began Sunday. Tight security has been in effect since he arrived aboard a Cuban navy ship.

Immediately after Castro departed, a spontaneous calypso dance erupted in the square and the smell of marijuana hung heavy in the air.

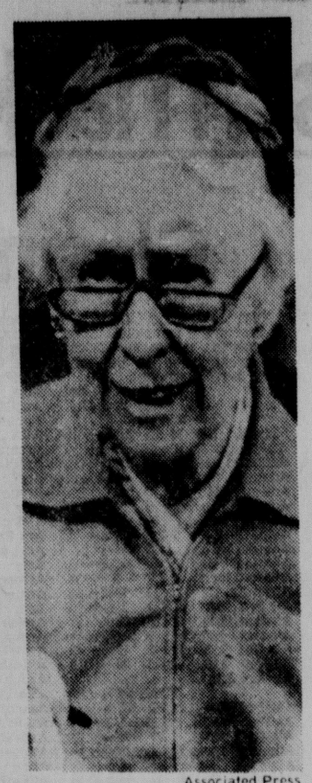

Castro said he and his host, Jamaican Prime Minister Michael Manley, sought to eliminate poverty, unemployment and illiteracy. "We through our own path, and Jamaica through its own path," he said.

To make its revolution, Cuba "nationalized everything," he said, but added that Cuba "doesn't want to tell Jamaica what to do."

Castro's speech was remarkably free of anti-American rhetoric and he mentioned the United States only in passing.

He did express gratitude to the Soviet Union, without whose help during the U.S. economic blockade, "our revolution would not have survived."

The rally at Montego Bay celebrated National Heroes Day, a Jamaican holiday commemorating seven Jamaican historical figures, including Manley's father, former Prime Minister Norman Washington Manley, and Sam Sharpe.

Dentist says Little 'forced' to escape

Raleigh, N.C. (AP) — With Joan Little still a fugitive Monday, a dentist for whom she had worked recently said prison officials "forced her" to escape by removing her chances for parole and "giving her very little to lose."

David P. Lane, a Raleigh dentist, said he believed Miss Little, 23, fled the North Carolina Correctional Center for Women here Saturday "because of the severe penalty they gave her" for allegedly violating conditions of the work-release program.

She had been expected to be considered for parole next month until she was cited by prison officials last week for failing to report to Lane's office for work Sept. 13 and 14. Her work privilege was revoked after a disciplinary hearing and she was segregated from other inmates for several days.

Miss Little, a black woman, had received nationwide publicity in 1975 when she was acquitted of murder in the stabbing death of a white Beaufort County jailer she said had tried to rape her while she awaited trial on breaking-and-entering charges.

She had been serving a seven-to-10 year sentence on the breaking-and-entering conviction at the time she escaped.. Prison officials believe she broke out by scaling a 10-foot-high chain-link fence.

Before she lost her job, Lane said, Miss Little "didn't want to escape. If she had wanted to go, she had plenty of time and opportunity before.

"I think she walked off because of the severe penalty. She knew her chance for parole was gone, and I guess she felt she had nothing to lose."

Jerry Paul, the Durham attorney whom defended Miss Little in her murder trial, said Monday he had reason to believe Miss Little was with a male companion in the Norfolk, Va., area and was not being allowed to contact anyone.

"I wouldn't call it a kidnaping, but it's possible she is with someone who would not allow her the freedom to call me," Paul said in a telephone interview.

Paul said "someone who I have reason to believe knows what he's talking about" told him that Miss Little was with "a friend of hers who may be scared for her and not allow her to call."

The lawyer declined to identify Miss Little's possible companion, but said he was trying to reach the man or his relatives and to get a description of the car the man is believed to be driving.

But Ben Runkle, public information officer for the N.C. Department of Corrections, reported no new developments in the search.

Authorities said they were checking Miss Little's known associates hoping to find some indication of her whereabouts.

Paul, meanwhile, lost his bid Monday to have the Supreme Court review a contempt of court conviction which stemmed from his conduct at Miss Little's 1975 trial.

He now faces a two-week jail sentence.

Drinks could be dry with powdered alcohol

Washington (AP) — The ultimate in the dry martini may be headed for the American market — powdered booze.

The Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms is studying powdered alcohol, developed by a Japanese firm and being considered for sale in pre-mixed cocktails.

The actual alcohol, still in liquid form, is in tiny particles suspended in a powder that looks like a gelatin desert mix.

And, in fact, the first sales of the product in Japan have been as a rose wine gelatin.

But cocktails in small cans or foil packets are being studied for the American market. Global Marketing of Seattle, said distribution in this country depends on how the Treasury Department decides to tax the product.

A Treasury Department spokesman, who said the product's safety will be checked, noted that officials were having some problems deciding how to apply tax laws written for liquid alcohol to a powder.

Mike Hill of Global Marketing said initial plans, if the government approves, call for cocktails that could be made by simply adding water to the product.

Senate conferees' attitude irks House leader

Washington (UPI) — Speaker Thomas O'Neill complained to a news conference Monday the attitude of Senate conferees working with House members on an abortion compromise is "insulting to the House."

O'Neill said the House conferees have reported that often only one Senator will show up at the conference sessions.

"It's insulting to the House and I intend to talk to (Senate Democratic Leader) Bobby Byrd and ask if he will talk to his conferees," said O'Neill.

Arab oil exports fall

Nicosia, Cyprus (AP) — Saudi Arabia's crude oil exports fell sharply in August to 8.1 million barrels per day from an average of 9.06 million in July and 8.8 million in June, the Middle East Economic Survey reported.

Market is weak, listless

Dow Ind. —1.30

New York (AP) — Two takeover candidates — Alcon Laboratories and Miles Laboratories — were the standout performers in a generally weak and listless tock market session Monday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, reflecting the subdued mood of the over-all market, slipped 1.30 to 820.34 after an 18.71-point drop last week.

Losers outpaced gainers by close to a 5-3 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, and the exchange's composite index eased .05 to 51.19.

It was hardly a dull day, however, for investors in Alcon Laboratories. The stock, which had traded as low as 16⅛ earlier this year, shot up 9 points to 38⅞ and led the active list as of the 4 p.m. close of the NYSE.

Nestle S.A. of Switzerland proposed an offer of $42 a share to acquire the pharmaceutical manufacturer.

Miles, maker of such consumer products as Alka Seltzer, One-a-Day vitamins and S.O.S. scouring pads, meanwhile climbed 4½ to 46. Miles directors approved a $47-a-share takeover bid by West Germany's Bayer A.G.

Among other issues responding to special developments was Hilton Hotels, up 1¾ at 21¼. Hilton said its management planned to recommend that the board of directors authorize the company to offer $22 apiec for 2 million of its own shares.

The Amex market value index fell .67 to 114.92.

Justice officials talk about questioning Park

(c) New York Times

Seoul, South Korea — Justice officials from the United States and South Korea opened formal talks here Monday on the U.S. desire to question Tongsun Park, the South Korean businessman who is the central figure in an alleged influence-buying scandal in Washington.

Four officials from each nation met for more than eight hours in a negotiating session that ended only shortly before South Korea's nightly curfew went into effect at midnight.

Officials of both sides refused to talk to reporters.

In a brief joint statement, read aloud, spokesmen said some procedural progress had been made and that the two sides agreed to meet again. But there was no sign of any package agreement on the issue, which U.S. officials have characterized as vital to the full legal prosecution of the case.

The participants' reluctance to submit to questioning by reporters and the statement's vague emphasis on the "earnest and useful" talks prompted persons in political circles in Seoul to believe that an agreement for American questioning of Park in Korea was proving to be difficult to achieve.

South Korea, which has no extradition treaty with the United States, says it is conducting its own investigation of Park's lavish lobbying activities. But Park's testimony could be highly embarrassing to the government of President Park Chung Hee if it should substantiate published allegations linking South Korea's president with Park's Washington activities. The men are not related.

The participants in the bilateral talks for South Korea were Lee Chong Won, vice minister of justice; An Kyong Sang, his deputy; Kim Yu Hu, a secretary, and Han Myong Sok as interpreter.

For the Americans it was Benjamin R. Civiletti, assistant attorney general in charge of the Justice Department's criminal division; Paul Michel, in charge of the Korean case; Allan Meyer of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and Douglas McNeal of the U.S. Embassy in Seoul as interpreter.

The American members arrived Saturday morning and spent Sunday conferring with American officials. They are expected to depart for Washington Wednesday, the same day the House ethics committee is scheduled to open its hearings on Park's alleged effort to buy influence for South Korea among U.S. congressmen.

Park, a 42-year-old rice dealer, is under a 36-count indictment for his alleged acts, charging him with, among other things, bribery and fraud.

Carter administration officials are believed anxious to work out some productive interrogation of Park, in part to help keep the criminal investigation separate from congressional consideration of military aid requests for South Korea. Such aid, which will total mearly $2 billion in all forms in the next few years, is the compensatory foundation of President Carter's plans to withdraw the 33,000 U.S. ground troops now based in South Korea.

Ryder will be returned law license

United Press International

A former deputy Douglas County attorney who pleaded guilty to a felony in 1973 was reinstated to practice law in Nebraska Monday by the State Supreme Court.

Thomas F. Ryder, 39, formerly of Omaha and now residing and working in California, recently reapplied for admission to the Nebraska Bar Association. In June 1973, the Supreme Court accepted Ryder's voluntary surrender of his law license and disbarred him.

Ryder served as a deputy to Douglas County Attorney Donald Knowles for 10 years before Knowles fired him in May 1973 when Knowles charged him with forging an endorsement on a check.

Ryder pleaded guilty to the charge and District Judge John Burke fined him $500 and placed him on a year's probation.

Two years ago, Omaha police discovered five guns from the police property room were missing. A police investigation showed the weapons were turned over to Ryder in 1972 for prosecution in a narcotics case but never returned.

One of the guns, an automatic rifle, was confiscated from three Omahans by the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission near Fremont on Sept. 1, 1975.

One of the three arrested, Ronald Henningsen of Omaha, was convicted of a federal firearms offense, but no further action was taken against Ryder.

Henningsen is the publisher of the Daily Record, a legal newspaper, and the Douglas County Gazette and the Metro newspapers.

Burglars pick on SCC twice over weekend

Southeast Community College, 2240 Vine, was hit by buglars sometime during the weekend in two separate incidents, police said.

Burglars pried open outside and interior doors to reach the lunchroom where they stole approximately $70 from food machines. A small socket set worth $10, approximately $100 from a coin changer and $40 worth of miscellaneous items from cabinets were stolen.

In a second weekend incident, burglars broke a window and entered the college's office, where they pried open the front desk and removed a money bag containing approximately $167, police said. Also stolen was a $99 check made out to the college and $10 from other desk drawers.

Police had no suspects.

Local attorney disbarred for estate fraud actions

United Press International

A former Lincoln attorney was disbarred by the Nebraska Supreme Court Monday for fraudulently handling an estate, the assets of which declined by an estimated $200,000.

Justice C. Tallman voluntarily surrendered his Nebraska law license to the Supreme Court Sept. 1 and conceded State Bar Association allegations that he made loans and investments from the estate were true.

Tallman was appointed trustee for the state of Don J. Young of Lincoln in December 1960 following Young's death 11 months earlier.

Tallman moved to Oregon in 1963 where he was edmitted to practice law, but continued control of the Young estate.

Two years ago, the National Bank of Commerce in Lincoln assumed the trusteeship of the estate and subsequently filed an application in Lancaster County District Court alleging wrongdoing by Tallman.

The court entered judgments against Tallman for losses totaling $197,711 plus interest of $26,200.

The bar association investigation showed Tallman made loans from the Young estate to a distributing firm in Oregon called C & G Distributors Inc. of which Tallman was a director, the registered agent and incorporator.

In 1973, C & G Distributors ceased operation and its remaining assets were sold.

The association alleged Tallman failed to pay back $42,100 to the Young estate even though some C & G creditors were paid.

SBA loans in state total $36 million

Omaha (UPI) — The Small Business Administration said Monday it made 536 loans totaling more than $36 million in Nebraska during fiscal 1977 ending Sept. 30.

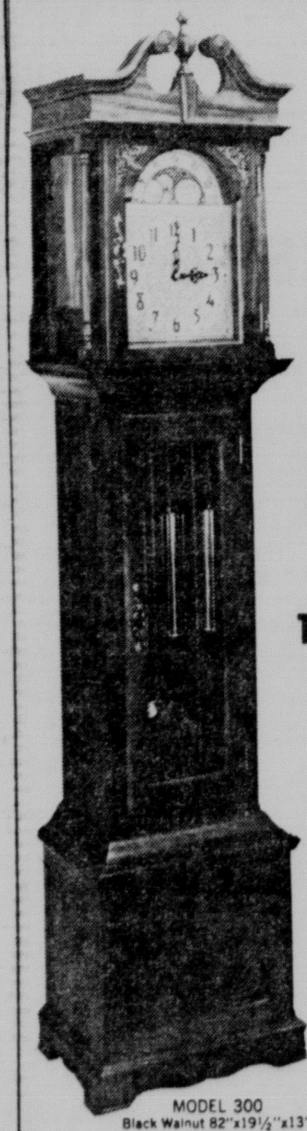

The SBA said the loan total did not include disaster loans or local development company loans made during the year.

Of the total, 101 business loans with a value of $8.5 million were made in Douglas County, the SBA said.

About 95% of the loans were made by banks with the SBA guaranteeing 90% of the loans to the individual businessmen-recipients involved.

Vets use VA hospitals due to need, panel told

Washington (UPI) — Most veterans who use Veterans Administration hospitals do so because of poverty, not because the medical care offered is better suited to their needs, a congressional committee was told Monday.

Dr. Saul Farber, whose special panel took a detailed look at facilities, staff and patient care in the VA system, said if veterans had sufficient insurance coverage through a national health scheme to afford civilian medical facilities, most VA hospitals would be unnecessary.

Testifying before the Senate veterans affairs subcommittee, Farber said only 3 million veterans — 20% of the vet population — use VA hospitals while 90% rely on other health services available in the community.

Although VA health care was initially established to provide prompt, top-flight care to veterans with service-related disabilities, Farber said 71% of those using the hospitals have no such disabilities, and only 15% of the VA services fall into this special classification.

While the special social problems of veterans are unique and require special treatment, he said, the medical and surgical problems faced by veterans are the same as faced by the population as a whole.

Farber said the veterans who use the system "are indeed needy. They generally have low incomes, either have no health insurance or have inadequate coverage in relation to their income."

For acute care services, he said, the capacity of non-federal facilities and resources in the vicinity of VA hospitals "was adequate and frequently excessive" and in general, VA facilities "are duplicative" and "inefficient."

"From a public policy perspective, the VA is operating its acute care hospital system to compensate for the inadequate insurance coverage of the needy 10% of the veteran population."

Farber said the findings "are particularly significant when considering how the enactment of further federal health insurance legislation may affect the acute care role of the VA.

"If a significant fraction of the veterans who now use the VA for acute care are given sufficient insurance coverage to use community facilities, many — perhaps most — may not use VA facilities."

He said the country as a whole has been over-investing in hospital facilities, "and it is the U.S. taxpayer who is paying for the excess capacity both in VA hospitals and in non-federal hospitals."

Gunmen halt plane, kill pilot, official's mother

Djibouti, Djibouti (UPI) — Two gunmen wielding submachine guns halted an Air Djibouti airliner before takeoff and shot to death the French pilot and a cabinet minister's mother, police reported Monday.

A number of passengers were wounded in the attack Sunday at this tiny, new republic on the Horn of Africa.

The gunmen were described as nationalist extremists involved in the racial strife gripping neighboring Ethiopia. Djibouti's Afar tribesmen are divided in their loyalties to Ethiopia and Djibouti. The police report made no mention of the fate of the gunmen and it was assumed they had escaped.

Police said the attack was at Tajourah, a dusty township in the north of this desert republic, which was known as the Territory of Afars and Issas before it won independence from France in June.

The shooting occurred 16 hours before the arrival of the hijacked Lufthansa jet in Mogadishu, Somalia, about 300 miles south of here.

Police said two men carrying submachine guns held up the domestic DeHavilland Twin Otter airliner as it was beginning to taxi away from the Tajourah airport. One of the attackers climbed aboard, shot the pilot with a burst of fire, and ordered the 10 passengers headed for Djibouti to step down.

On the ground, police reported, the gunmen shot to death the mother of Justice Minister Ismail Ali Youssouf, one of the members of the 16-man cabinet ruling the Djibouti republic.

Officials said the attackers apparently were pro-Ethiopian Afar tribesmen. Members of that faction were incensed recently by the seizure of a stock of Soviet-made Kalashnikov submachine guns being shipped via Djibouti territory to their racial kinsmen in Ethiopia.

Officials indicated the seizure had been ordered by Justice Minister Youssef, who belongs to a pro-Somali Afar faction.

Tensions erupted inside the cabinet headed by Premier Ahmed Dini, another Afar, after the capture of the weapons, with pro-Ethiopian cabinet ministers demanding the disarming of tribesmen supporting Somalia.

Somalia and Ethiopia have been battling for months over the Ogaden desert, which makes up the extreme eastern tip of Ethiopia, thrusting into the heart of Somalia.

Guard says police afraid to intervene

Guadalajara, Mexico (UPI) — Sporadic fighting among rival prisoners at overcrowded Jalisco state penitentiary has wounded convicts every day since last week's riot that killed 14 inmates, but a prison guard said Monday police are afraid to intervene.

"Every day, two or three guys are wounded in fighting and taken to hospitals in an ambulance," the guard said. "Everybody thinks the prisoners are hiding machine guns and possibly bombs, so the police are afraid to go in."

This reporter saw a prisoner who appeared to be paralyzed in both legs being lifted into an ambulance. Officials said the man had suffered an "accident."

About 100 police, some armed with anti-riot gear, surround the 45-year-old prison, which looks like a medieval castle.

Prison Director Pedro Parra has admitted he has no control of what goes on inside the prison.

"I can't confront (the prisoners) because I don't have enough men and arms to do it. Things are going very badly. These are very strong groups made up of bloodthirsty and very dangerous people. They could clash at any moment," he said in an interview.

On Oct. 10, members of the Armed Peoples Revolutionary Front attacked a gang of prisoners known as the "Jackals," who control such prison concessions as drugs, food, tobacco and rental of cells.

The front, led by two brothers, Ramon and Juventino Campana Lopez, beat and stabbed to death 14 of the "Jackals" and wounded 20 others before the battle ended Oct. 11.

The Lopez brothers are serving time for the kidnappings of U.S. Consul Terrance Leonhardy in 1973, and the abduction of former President Luis Echeverria's father-in-law, Jose Guadalupe Zuno, in 1974.

Forty-eight members of the "Jackals" fled to the prison visitors' room at the time of the riot and were still holding out there Monday.

Parra said arrangements were being made to transfer them to another prison, along with the 10 U.S. citizens imprisoned there.

Volunteer agency chiefs get praise from Mondale

Washington (UPI) — Vice President Walter Mondale Monday swore in four top-ranking officials of Action, the federal volunteer agency, including civil rights activist John Lewis who will head domestic anti-poverty efforts.

Mondale described Lewis, who held his 16-month-old son John in his arms during much of the ceremony, as a man who "saw the need for peaceful change in our country years ago."

Mondale also administered the oath of office to Carolyn Payton, the first woman director of the Peace Corps; Mary Leyland, Action's assistant director for administration and finance, and Irene Tinker, assistant director for policy and planning.

Lewis, as a freedom rider in the 1960s, helped desegregate public transportation in South Carolina and later in Alabama. He was arrested 40 times in connection with civil rights struggles and was hospitalized with head injuries during the 1965 march from Selma, Ala., to Montgomery, Ala.

He headed a voter education project in Atlanta and was later defeated in an attempt to win the Georgia congressional seat vacated by U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young.

Lewis, 37, as associate director for Action's domestic operations, will direct the activities of more than 238,000 action volunteers in anti-poverty and community service projects in towns and cities across the country.

During the ceremony in the Roosevelt Room at the White House, Mondale said "nothing points up the ideals of the Carter administration or the American people more fully than action." He noted President Carter's mother, Miss Lillian, served in the Peace Corps in India for two years.

Ms. Payton, a psychologist at Howard University in Washington, D.C., will direct the work of more than 6,200 Peace Corps volunteers overseas. She has said she believes more black and minority persons could benefit from Peace Corps experience.

Woman is first

Carolyn Forrest was named an administrative assistant Monday by United Auto Workers President Douglas A. Fraser. She is the first woman to hold that position in the UAW. Mrs. Forrest, a member of the UAW Amalgamated Local 408 in Detroit, has been an international representative on the staff of Region 1E since 1967 and was the first woman at that time to be given a regional servicing assignment.

Israel called racist

Washington (UPI) — A professor at Jerusalem's Hebrew University accused the Israeli government of racism Monday, saying it excludes everyone but Jews from settlements in occupied Arab territories.

In testimony before a Senate judiciary subcommittee on refugees, Dr. Israel Shahak said his government's actions were almost worse than those practiced by South Africa.

Shahak, an Israeli citizen, said his country is violating human rights by confiscating land "in a particularly cruel and unjust way" in the occupied West Bank, the Golan Heights, the Gaza Strip and the Sinai.

"The military government of the occupied territories has devoted this land, in principle and in fact, to the uses of the Israeli settlements only, without any regard to the fact that it has served the existing population of the conquered territories from time immemorial," he said.

"Moreover, this uses is racist use."

He said that while the settlements are called "Israeli," they are exclusively Jewish.

Did a mouse do that?

Metz, France (AP) — An insurance company has been ordered to pay a $1,200 claim for damage to a car caused by a mouse trapped in the car's engine.

According to testimony, mice nesting under the car's hood became trapped by the fanbelt and damaged the auto's cooling system. The award covered the cost of repair work.

The court said the award was justified because of a clause in the policy that said the company would cover "damage caused by impact with a fixed or moving body."

The insurance company has appealed.

2,000 tour home

The small car of the future is here today. We've combined innovative design and engineering with exceptional comfort, performance and economy to create a totally new kind of car.

Le Car comes with front-wheel drive, rack and pinion steering, four-wheel independent suspension and Michelin steel-belted radials, all standard. Chevette, Rabbit, Honda Civic and Fiesta don't.

Le Car gives you 41 MPG, highway, 26 MPG, city according to 1978 EPA figures. Remember: These mileage figures are estimates. The actual mileage you get will vary depending on the type of driving you do, your driving habits, your car's condition and optional equipment.

When you drive Le Car you'll discover what nearly 2 million people around the world already know.
Prices start at only $3495
*Sweepstakes end November 30, 1977.

Le Car/Club Med Sweepstakes
Come in and test drive the '78 version of the car that more than doubled sales in '77.
You could win a 1-week all-expense-paid trip for two to the Club Mediterranee of your choice in the French Caribbean.*

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Astrological Forecast

By Sidney Omarr

Tuesday, October 18, 1977

Q — I, a Libran, read your column faithfully and find your forecasts to be very accurate. My favorite, all-time entertainer is Tony Randall. What can you tell me about him? — Donna Dubell, Elizabeth, N.J.

A — Tony Randall has the sun in Pisces, the moon in Scorpio and Mars in Sagittarius. These planetary positions, plus other factors, reveal an individual who is sensitive, brilliant, stubborn, eccentric, fiery and emotional where beliefs are concerned. He will be very happy when 1977 is finished — he is in a cycle of preparation, much of his "finished product" will be in evidence in 1978, especially towards the year end. Incidentally, Donna, your all-time favorite is sadly lacking in knowledge about astrology.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Waters tend to be rough — don't base plans on smooth sailing. Assignment is challenge, obstacle can be stepping-stone, but no one is handing you anything on silver platter. Have facts, figures at hand. Protect interests. Capricorn figures in scenario.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Long-range view brings productive results. Utilize experience — and intuition. Travel and other plans subject to change, revision. Aries, Libra figure prominently. Legal underbrush requires clearance. Don't get caught in middle of a "mess."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Highlight independence, fresh start, creativity, new directions. Let go of losing situation. You have right to improve position and security potential. Money, possessions are very much involved. Seek ways to gain most from assets — opportunities area available.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Study Aries message — lie low. Do more listening than asserting. Plan, gather data, check legal rights and permissions. Give attention to partner or mate. Ride with tide. You are due for "message" which renews sense of direction. Wait!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Diversify. Accent versatility. Your marvelous ability to converse, to grasp quickly comes to forefront — you improve services, earn compliments. Popularity increases. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure in scenario. Stick to number 3.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your ability to perceive, to be thorough, to detect subtle clues, nuances serves you well. Be confident, direct — permit creative juices to flow. Adhere to your own style. Young person is ally and proves it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be analytical; take nothing for granted. Determine reasons for recent happenings. Financial metter is settled if you take personal interest. What seems like "impossible" situation is merely a temporary rocking of the boat.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Stick to familiar material, stay close to home base. Be diplomatic, steer away from heavy traffic. Stick to number 6. Taurus, Libra individuals figure prominently. Relative is confused, especially when it comes to "counting change."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Define terms. Say what you mean. Pisces, Virgo figure prominently. Money, possessions are very much a part of scenario. Someone whispers "sweet nothings." Keep feet on ground. Avoid self-deception.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Cycle is such you can get down to business, achieve, be recognized, gain added stature. You'll have more responsibility — and a bigger portion of the pie. You can be at right place at right time. Be confident.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Finish what you start. You're being tested, observed. You are your own judge. Let conscience be your guide. Aries, Libra figure prominently. Stick to number 9. Look behind scenes; what appears obvious could have a catch to it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take initiative in making contacts, new starts. Stress independence of thought, action. Deal with Leo, Aquarius persons. Stick with number 1. Friends are involved in dispute. Walk away if you can't remain neutral.

IF OCTOBER 18 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are placid on the outside, fiery on the inside. You love all the way, or nothing. You are direct, creative, basically truthful, even though you have been hurt by those who take much and give little. Aries plays important role in your life. In December, you will realize you are on your way to bigger, better things.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
